Bombing Continues; 7 Fliers Lost

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — The United States kept up the war's heaviest bombardment of the Hanoi-Haiphong heartland of North Vietnam today and the U.S. Command reported the loss of another B52 heavy bomber, an A7 fighter-bomber and seven more fliers.

A report from Warsaw said three Polish sailors were killed when U.S. bombers hit a Polish cargo ship in Haiphong harbor.

The admitted U.S. losses since the bombings began Monday rose to three B52s, two fighter-bombers, including one of the Air Force's $15-million swept-wing F111s, and 15 fliers missing.

Hanoi asserted two more B52s and four more fighter-bombers were shot down Tuesday night and early today in the second night of the attack. Earlier it announced the names of six B52 crewmen it said were captured Monday night and Tuesday.

The U.S. Command reported that two U.S. sailors were killed when a North Vietnamese shore battery put a five-foot hole in an upper deck of the destroyer Goldsborough on Tuesday. Three crewmen were wounded and a crew berthing area was heavily damaged but the Navy said the destroyer kept on firing.

The North Vietnamese radio said the Polish ship Joseph Conrad was hit by U.S. bombers in Haiphong harbor Tuesday morning, damaging the loading cranes on the stern, blasting a big hole in a lifeboat and wounding four crew members.

The ship's owners said in Warsaw, however, that three sailors were killed. A spokesman for Poland's state-run Ocean Lines said the Joseph Conrad had been held in Haiphong since the harbor was mined by the United States several months ago and only a maintenance crew was aboard.

The Command gave no details on the second night of attacks on the Hanoi-Haiphong region, maintaining one of the densest news blackouts of the war. But U.S. officials said scores of B52s pounded the Hanoi-Haiphong corridor during the night, and there appeared to be no letup in the raids. Hundreds of fighter-bombers also are taking part.

Radio Hanoi said U.S. bombers "again bombed several densely populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong."

Hanoi reiterated that the bombing, despite its devastation, would not force it to accept President Nixon's peace terms.

While the U.S. Command has refused to disclose any of the targets being attacked, other sources indicated they included radio transmitters, power stations and the two rail lines between Hanoi and China.

Some of the targets had never been attacked before, U.S. officials said.

The Goldsborough was hit as it was bombarding the coast just south of the 20th parallel. A spokesman said the ship "continued its combat mission" despite the casualties and damage.

Meanwhile, the South Vietnamese command reported more heavy fighting in Quang Tri Province below the demilitarized zone. A communique claimed South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers and U.S. fighter-bombers supporting them killed 154 North Vietnamese in two battles north and south of Quang Tri City. Eight South Vietnamese were killed and 48 wounded, the communique said.

Resumption Of Bombing Condemned

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope Paul VI expressed "doleful upset" today at the renewed U.S. heavy bombing of North Vietnam. In an official statement, the Danish government said hopes for peace "suffered a tragic setback and condemnations came from the Swedish, Soviet and Chinese governments.

The Pope told a crowd of 3,000 at his weekly public audience in St. Peter's Basilica he had hoped peace would return to Vietnam by Christmas.

"Does not our expectation conflict today with our doleful upset at the sudden resumption of harsh and massive war actions in that blessed Vietnam which has become the object of daily grief," he continued, "when everybody in the world thought a preliminary peaceful settlement of the long conflict to be imminent and we hoped it would coincide with the feast of Christmas?"

Denmark is allied with the United States in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but Premier Anker Joergensen announced his determination to protest to Washington amid an unprecedented wave of public indignation.

"I want the United States out of Vietnam," said the premier, who after taking office last October allowed an unofficial international war crimes commission to meet in Denmark.

"The Nixon administration is bombing a small country back to the Stone Age," said the conservative Danish newspaper B.T. "For each bomb dropped, the administration exposes its own Stone Age mentality." The country's largest daily, Ekstrabladet, headlined an editorial "Bloody Nixon."

Swedish Foreign Minister Krister Wickman accused the United States of "blind and brutal" bombing and said: "The renewed escalation creates serious fears that the war will be prolonged, something nothing could justify."

China declared the massive U.S. bombing, "in the manner of a surprise attack ... completely lays bare the inconsistency and perfidy of the U.S. government towards the peace negotiations."

Hsinhua, the official news agency, accused the United States of "trying to force the Vietnamese people to knuckle under," but said "It is clear that no threat of blackmail whatever can bring them to their knees."

The Soviet Union's three top leaders — Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin — sent a telegram to the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government "strongly condemning" the U.S. bombing.

Accreditation Team

Members of the North Central Examination Team gather for a conference Wednesday morning at State Fair Community College on the final day of the team's visit to the school. The team will determine whether the college meets the criteria necessary for recognized candidacy status for North Central Colleges and Secondary Schools. Full accreditation is not expected by the school for two or three years. Dr. William L. Ramsey (standing), of the Milwaukee Area Technical College, is the team committee chairman. Seated, left-right, are: Dr. Dale B. Lake, Kalamazoo Valley Community College, Michigan; Dr. Ray Cattani, Mesa Community College, Arizona; William T. Collopy, Kellog Community College, Michigan; and F. Harold Matthews, Jackson Community College, Michigan.

Report Severe Damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon reported today that U.S. bombers have inflicted "very significant damage" on about a dozen different kinds of military targets in what appeared to be virtually nonstop raids on Hanoi-Haiphong and other areas of North Vietnam.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim refused to agree with a reporter's characterization of the attacks as "terror bombings."

"We are striking military targets," Friedheim told a briefing. "We do not strike civilian targets.

He said U.S. bombing of civilian targets in North Vietnam has been "extremely rare."

For the first time since the intensive bombing of all North Vietnam resumed Monday, Friedheim listed the types of targets being hit, although he still refused to discuss specific targets by name and location.

He listed railyards at Haiphong, command and control facilities, warehouses and transshipment points, communication facilities, vehicle repair facilities, power plants, railroad bridges, railroad rolling stock, truck parks, MIG fighter bases, air defense radar and antiaircraft missiles and gun sites.

This indicated, among other things, that U.S. warplanes were attempting to cripple North Vietnamese supply transportation facilities which had been repaired to some extent during the nearly two months when bombers were forbidden to strike north of the 20th Parallel.

That limitation was ordered by President Nixon in late October to encourage progress toward a peace settlement, but was lifted early this week on grounds the North Vietnamese were stalling and preparing for more military offensive action in South Vietnam.

Friedheim indicated that the campaign will be going on for some time.

"We are early in this engagement," he said at one point.

Astronauts Head For Reunion

ABOARD USS TICONDEROGA (AP) — Back from the moon, their adventure behind them and history made, the men of the last Apollo are sailing toward home and a reunion with their familes four days before Christmas.

The flight of the last, most perfect Apollo mission is over, after a space journey of 13 days.

Apollo 17 astronauts Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Harrison H. Schmitt rode the command ship America through a fiery entry into the earth's atmosphere Tuesday and a bobbing parachute fall to a perfect landing within sight of recovery ships.

Plucked from a life raft and whisked to this carrier by helicopter for a bands-and-speeches welcome, the astronauts spent their first hours back on earth undergoing physical examinations by a team of space agency doctors.

After a quick check, Dr. Charles K. LaPinta, the medical team leader, said, "I am very pleased with their condition — they look fine."

Navy chefs aboard the Ticonderoga prepared a huge welcome-aboard cake and dinner in the officers' mess for the astronauts, the ship's officers and Navy brass and congressmen and senators on hand to watch the return of Apollo 17.

After a day and a night aboard the Ticonderoga, the astronauts will fly from the carrier to Pago Pago, in American Samoa. There they will board another plane for a flight to Ellington Air Force Base, near the Manned Spacecraft Center outside of Houston, Tex., where their families await them.

While the astronauts continued the cruise toward home, officials at the space center in Texas praised the flight as the most perfeet of America's six moon landings.

"I've never seen a more perfect mission than was flown on this flight," said Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Manned Spacecraft Center. "Certainly that crew was the best crew we've ever flown."

In a statement on the completion of Apollo, President Nixon said the flight "marks the end of one of the most significant chapters in the history of human endeavor."

Apollo 17's landing in the Pacific 400 miles southeast of Samoa was like the rest of the mission since launch — flawless.

A team of recovery experts helped to unload the command ship America after it too was hoisted aboard the Ticonderoga.

Seeks To Stop Bids On Patrol Project

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov.-elect Christopher S. Bond asked the state director of planning and construction today not to let bids on Dec. 28 for a new Troop E headquarters of the highway patrol near Sikeston.

The proposed move from Poplar Bluff is the subject of litigation and has aroused charges of political influence.

In a letter to John D. Paulus, planning and construction director, Bond noted that bids are to be opened Dec. 28 for the new headquarters and said:

"As governor-elect, I formally request you not to let bids on that date for the construction of a new headquarters building, and that no bids be let or contracts be awarded for the proposed project until the entire matter can be reviewed by the newly designated superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol after confirmation by the Senate."

Bond recently designated Maj. Samuel S. Smith to succeed Col. E. I. Hockaday as superintendent of the patrol. Hockaday, who is retiring, picked the site near Sikeston as the location for the troop headquarters.

Meanwhile Circuit Judge Frank Conley has set a hearing for next Tuesday afternoon in the suit challenging the proposed move of the southeastern Missouri headquarters.

One of the questions to be decided is whether the state Highway Commission must approve moving the headquarters from the location where it has been for 35 years and using highway funds to build the new headquarters.

At a pre-trial conference Tuesday, attorneys said Col. E. I. "Mike" Hockaday, patrol superintendent, indicated formal commission approval never had been sought before in such cases.

Newsman in First Amendment Court Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Los Angeles Times Washington bureau, jailed briefly for refusing to surrender tapes he said were confidential, will remain free until a federal appeals court rules on his test of the First Amendment freedoms.

The Times' John F. Lawrence was held in contempt of court Tuesday by U.S. Dist. Judge John J. Sirica who ordered the newsman jailed "until he purges himself of contempt" by turning over the subpoenaed tapes.

Lawrence was held for about two hours until the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered him released.

At an emergency hearing today, the appeals court decided Lawrence would not be returned to jail pending "further consideration of papers and argument before this court." No date was set immediately for continuation of the case.

In Los Angeles, Times publisher Otis Chandler told newsmen his paper would press the appeal on constitutional issues he said are "of utmost importance to the future of our profession."

The material Lawrence acknowledged possessing but refused to turn over to the court is a tape recording of two Times reporters' interviews with Alfred C. Baldwin III, a key figure in the alleged bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters earlier this year.

The defense wants to compare Baldwin's interviews with what he says in the trial of seven men charged with the June 17 break-in and alleged bugging of the DNC offices at the Watergate apartment-hotel complex here. One of the defendants was at the time chief security officer for the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

On Oct. 5, the Times published a first-person account by Baldwin, as told to reporters Jack Nelson and Ronald J. Ostrow, detailing how he monitored telephone conversations at Democratic headquarters from a motel across the street and later delivered information to Nixon campaign headquarters.

Nelson and Ostrow agreed to keep secret certain material from the interviews as a condition for Baldwin granting the interview, the reporters said. The Times contends the confidential information is protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of press freedom.

Defense attorneys in the case asked that the tapes be subpoenaed because, they said, they might contain information they could use to challenge Baldwin's credibility.

Sirica ruled that the Constitution's guarantee of a free press does not give newsmen the right to keep secret any information that could be used as evidence in a criminal trial.

Generators Providing Milk Power

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Portable generators are providing power to milk dairy cows in three Missouri counties following the ice storm which pulled down lines.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday some of the cows had not been milked since Dec. 11 in Stone, Lawrence and Dade counties.

The Stone County sheriff's office asked to help from Richard Groves, corps resident engineer at Table Rock Lake, who borrowed portable generators from resident engineer offices at five Arkansas towns: Pine Bluff, Dardanelle, Heber Springs, Mountain Home and Rogers. Trained operators were sent to dairy farms with the generators.

"The engineers worked almost continuously around the clock going from farm to farm in Stone, Lawrence and Dade counties until they were relieved late Sunday by Missouri National Guardsmen, who will operate the generators until power is restored to the area," the Corps said.

'On-Again, Off-Again' Bombings Are On-Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The resumption Monday of U.S. bombing above North Vietnam's 20th parallel is the latest installment in an on-again, off-again bombing policy dating back more than eight years.

The first American bombing raids against North Vietnam came Aug. 4-5, 1964 following the Gulf of Tonki incident in which two American warships, the USS Maddox and USS Turner Joy, allegedly were attacked by communist patrol boats.

Those raids were directed against North Vietnamese coastal bases, patrol boats and oil installations.

However, the first sustained bombing raids did not come until Feb. 7, 1965, in retaliation against Viet Cong attacks against American ground installations in South Vietnam.

The bombing continued unabated until May 13, 1965, when President Lyndon B. Johnson ordered a halt in hopes that North Vietnam would make a reciprocal move to de-escalate the war.

The bombing resumed four days later.

On Christmas Eve of that year, the bombing was halted again as part of a holiday ceasefire. The raids remained in abeyance until Jan. 31, 1966, while U.S. officials in Washington waited for a "peace signal" they hoped would lead to an end of the war.

The raids were halted briefly several times in 1966 and 1967 for holiday observances but there was no major change in U.S. bombing policy until March 31, 1968, when President Johnson announced a bombing halt in an area north of the 20th parallel including "90 per cent of North Vietnam's population and most of its territory.

This curtailment, announced during the same speech in which Johnson disclosed he would not seek re-election, was followed by the agreement for the Paris peace talks.

On April 7, 1968, U.S. military sources in Saigon said U.S. units had been ordered to bomb no further north than the 19th parallel and on Oct. 31, 1968, Johnson ordered an end to all U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

Except for periodic "protective reaction" strikes, there was no more bombing of North Vietnam until last April 6 when, without formal announcement, U.S. planes resumed large-scale bombing following a North Vietnamese invasion into South Vietnam.

On May 8 President Nixon announced that he had ordered the mining of all North Vietnamese ports and said that "air and naval strikes against military targets in North Vietnam will continue."

On Oct. 22 Nixon limited U.S. bombing operations to the 200-mile-long Panhandle area of North Vietnam south of the 20th parallel.

U.S. planes resumed bombing north of the 20th parallel Monday and the White House has indicated such raids will continue "until such time as a settlement is arrived at."

Transit Financing Proposed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mass transit for Missouri's cities should be financed by local, state and federal subsidies, according to an agreement reached Tuesday by the Governor's Task Force on Public Transportation.

The group met here to review a 75-page study by a Philadelphia consulting firm outlining the mass transit needs the next five years in Columbia, Jefferson City, Kansas City, Springfield and St. Louis.

The group adopted a motion by Lawrence K. Roos, St. Louis County supervisor, calling for combined financing by the three governmental bodies.

St. Louis Mayor A. J. Cervantes objected, saying transportation is the responsibility of the state, rather than local government.

Roos disagreed, saying the local governments would have a better chance of getting the public to accept a sales tax to finance such public transportation systems. He said this would especially be true if such a tax would make possible a reduction in fare rates.

The mistake was discovered when Garrett rountinely asked jail officials when his trial date was.

The Maxim's of Latin America?

No, just Latin America's first hotel school and the best food bargain in Sao Paulo, the largest city on the continent.

Maroon-jacketed waiters scurry softly on the carpeting of the restaurant, practicing their best bow and smile on guinea pig customers delighted to pay only 25 Cruzeiros (U.S. $3) for a three-star meal.

The school was founded five years ago to provide manpower for Brazil's drive toward making Latin America's largest country an attractive oasis for tourists and businessmen. Big hotel chains such as Hilton, Sheraton, Holiday Inns, Intercontinental and Meridien have already arrived or plan to build here soon.

"We can't graduate them fast enough," says director Herone Galhanone. "Our doormen, our barmen, our waiters, our cooks, our administrators, our maids are snatched away the day they leave their last class. We give them European polish."

The training program is run by Brazil's National Service of Commercial Apprenticeship (SENAC), a unique 25-year-old association of private businessmen supported by 1.5 per cent of their own payrolls. All Brazilian commercial enterprises must by law contribute to SENAC.

The Lauro Cardoso de Almeida Hotel School is merely one of 37 courses offered by Sao Paulo's SENAC on a $9 million annual budget. Others range from windowdressing to optics and from fashion modeling to professional coffee-tasting. More than half a million "Paulistas" have gone through SENAC, "but the hotel school is certainly the course which shows our face to the world," says Galhanone. "That's why we take such good care of it."

More than 100 persons on the staff of the school, in a downtown Sao Paulo building, train about 200 students a year. A hotel in a suburban spa resort, Aguas de Sao Pedro, has another 200 students.

Some of the teachers were hired in Europe.

Raymond Auguste Gottond, the moustached and bespectacled chief cook, has worked at Maxim's and Voisin in Paris. A few administrative employes were trained in Switzerland.

"I find some students much more willing to learn than in Europe," says Gottond. "But of course, there is none of the Cordon Blue tradition that the Europeans are instilled with."

Nevertheless, SENAC prints a different menu for every single day of the year. And the restaurant has become so popular that the menus are printed monthly in Sao Paulo's newspapers so gastronomers know when to show up.

One month this year was devoted to 30 different Italian dishes.

Another month was called "Around the world in 22 dinners" with choices from such faraway places as Syria and India.

"The United States not being known for especially haute cuisine, we chose the traditional dishes," explained Gottond.

One day, the menu consisted of chicken gumbo, Virginia ham steak and "cheese pie." Another day it was a thin disguise of standard cafeteria fare: tunafish salad, meatloaf, and strawberry pie.

Show Uproar Simmers

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's "Maude" show on CBS probably won't cause many protests. It isn't about abortion. Maude's over that now. She had her abortion in an episode broadcast last Nov. 21.

But the uproar from that show is far from over. It's still simmering and could lead to a unique court test of whether "fairness" is required of a television comedy show—or any entertainment show—when it deals with controversial issues.

The possibility first arose when a formal complaint about the way Maude's abortion was presented was mailed to CBS. The complaint came from the Holy Name Union of Rockville Centre, a local Catholic group to which lawyer Eugene McMahon belongs.

It gained impetus Dec. 1 when McMahon and three members of an anti-abortion group called the Long Island Coalition for Life met privately with Dr. Frank Stanton, CBS' vice-chairman.

Stanton had agreed to hear their complaints after coalition members picketing the CBS building here buttonholed him as he walked to his office the previous week.

They registered their protest, then asked him to present their group's views in the context of the "Maude" show on two successive Tuesdays, since she had talked about getting an abortion on one show and actually gotten it on the next.

As an alternative, McMahon said, they sought two half-hours of prime evening time on CBS to present their stand against abortion. He said the Holy Name Union complaint had asked for the same things.

Both complaints, he said, cited the "fairness" provision of the Federal Communications Commission act, as opposed to the FCC's "equal time" provision that applies only to political issues.

If CBS turns down either group, McMahon said, the next step is a "fairness time" petition to the FCC.

Petty Cash Box Planned in Park

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind. (AP) — An anonymous resident plans to fund a public petty cash box in the city's Newtown Park.

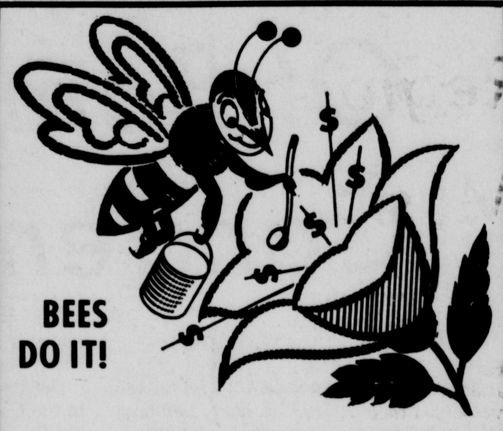

The city council has approved placing the box, called the "Faith in Mankind Money Box," in the park.

The resident, who said he wanted to do "something extra" for the community, will give $2,000 to newspaper publisher Gene McCann for deposit in a bank account. McCann will withdraw $10 from the account each day and place it in the box.

Anyone who needs money can take it with no strings attached, and, hopefully, repay it later.

Party Leader Resigns

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The executive director of the Democratic state committee resigned Tuesday and filed for the Democratic nomination for state auditor in 1974.

Dwight L. Fine, 30, said, "I am entering the race early because I want to concentrate my efforts toward developing an effective statewide organization. In this way I feel I can be instrumental in helping rebuild the Democratic party."

Fine, the first candidate to file, pledged "an open, honest campaign that will not divide the Democratic party nor will it diminish the Democrats' opportunity to win in 1974."

He was the campaign coordinator for Edward L. Dowd, this year's Democratic gubernatorial candidate. Before that he was administrative assistant to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick for two years.

He started working for the state as a budget analyst in 1965 and for two years was executive assistant to the state director of revenue.

Fine is a native of Hopkins, in Nodaway County. He holds bachelor and master of arts degrees from Ouachita Baptist University at Arkadelphia, Ark. In 1970 he was the campaign manager for Hayes McClerkin in his bid for governor of Arkansas.

Fine also holds a master's degree in public administration from the University of Missouri-Columbia. He is married and has a 5-year-old son.

The current auditor, Christopher S. Bond, is the governor-elect. He has named John D. Ashcroft, 30, associate professor of business law at Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield, to serve out the second half of his four-year term.

Saving Region's Music

By GARY LUHR
Associated Press Writer

BREA, Ky. (AP) — For generations, the mountain people have passed their culture from parent to child in stories and in songs.

But today, with many of the physical barriers between Appalachia and the rest of the country removed, some people fear this heritage could be lost in the mingling of lifestyles.

Berea College, long dedicated to educating the children of the mountains, has taken steps in recent years to preserve some of the Appalachian traditions through collections of literature and artifacts. This past year, it started another collection — a sound archives, focusing on the traditional music of the region.

"I think it's still possible to preserve a lot of it," said Loyal Jones, director of the school's Appalachian Center and the guiding hand behind this latest venture.

Assisting him is a committee of first-hand authorities, whose own resources give the college a wellspring of material it can tap for years to come. Among them are:

Asa Martin, of Irvine, Ky. still performing though he is over 70. He has given the college access to the nearly 500 records he has made in his lifetime.

John Lair, founder of the Renfro Valley Barn Dance, who has offered material from his collection of more than 2,000 pieces of sheet music.

Buell Kazee, of Winchester, Ky., whose contribution includes reproductions of his own recordings plus a video tape of a recent concert.

Bradley Kincaid, of Springfield, Ohio, a ballad singer from the early days of radio.

The college has received access to the collection at Mars Hill College of Bascom Lamar Lunsford, a North Carolina ballad singer who has recorded more than 350 songs for the Library of Congress. It also has acquired more than 50 commercial records that reproduce some of the traditional sounds.

The need for a sound archives was brought home to Jones last January when, as part of a course in Appalachia's "oral tradition," he asked each student to learn a ballad.

"Many of them didn't know what a ballad was and after they learned, most of them couldn't learn the tunes," he said. "I realized we had a lot of printed information (about ballads) but not much sound."

A ballad, by Jones' definition, is a song, usually of unknown origin, that tells a story about an event removed from the person singing. Many were brought to this country from Europe.

Describing the difference between the early folk singers and those of today Jones said, "The older singers were very self-effacing. They didn't sing to show off their voices. Very often their voices were quite ordinary.

"Their purpose was to tell a story. The tune was incidental, though some were very beautiful," he said.

Jones noted that the guitar, which has become standard equipment for the 20th century troubadour, wasn't a traditional mountain instrument. "In fact, most of the older singers never used instruments," he said.

General Assembly Session Concludes

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The 27th U.N. General Assembly is history, remembered by some as the "Assembly on Terrorism," and by others as a session of negotiation instead of confrontation, detente instead of tension.

The three-month annual assembly finished at 9:03 p.m. EST Tuesday with the traditional one minute of silent meditation by the envoys of the 132 countries.

At the end, only 14 spectators were in the 150-seat public gallery and one of those appeared to be asleep.

The last delegate seen leaving the assembly chamber, just as guards locked the doors, was America's George Bush.

He had stayed behind to sign autographs, shake hands with fellow diplomats and thank them for the "fantastic" way he had been received during two years as top U.S. delegate.

Bush is leaving for Washington to become chairman of the Republican National Committee. John Scali, White House foreign policy consultant and former Associated Press and American Broadcasting Co. reporter, has been named to succeed him.

In his farewell speech to the Assembly, Bush said perhaps the 27th assembly was dull but probably this was because it "moved forward along the road that leads away from the sensational politics of confrontation and rhetoric toward the kind of mature diplomacy that seeks practical solutions to the problems of mankind."

The retiring president of the assembly, Deputy Foreign Minister Stanislaw Trepczynski of Poland, said it was "thanks to the new climate of detente" in the world that the sharp political, ideological and other differences among U.N. members were not able to hamper U.N. efforts to strengthen international cooperation.

While the Middle East dispute remained stalemated, some U.N. diplomats said it was a triumph of negotiations over confrontation that the assembly had not worsened it.

Through efforts of many Western, nonaligned and moderate Arab countries, the final Middle East resolution was toned down from its original draft version to the point that Israel dropped threats to renounce the 1967 U.N. formula for eventual settlement.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah was one of those who called the session the "Assembly on Terrorism" because terrorism was the major new issue, prompted by the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics in September.

The United States and other Western powers were critical of the assembly for voting to limit antiterrorist efforts during the coming year to a study and rejecting treaty proposals.

Prostitution Charges Are Filed Here

Sedalia police served warrants of soliciting for prostitution to four Sedalia women Wednesday morning, Police Chief William Miller told The Democrat-Capital.

Charged with violating the city ordinance on prostitution are Ida Murphy, 24, 206 West Jefferson; Barbara Johnson, 32, 802 North Missouri; Karren Trammell, 23, 804 North Missouri; and Arletha Delores Frazier, 29, 212 East St. Louis.

The four are scheduled to appear in Sedalia police court Dec. 29, Miller said.

The women were taken into custody Saturday night by Sedalia police after they allegedly propositioned a police officer at East St. Louis and Mill, police said. The actual charges were filed Tuesday.

The women posted $50 bonds each Sunday morning and were released from the city jail, where they were being held for investigation of prostitution.

Miller said the bonds previously posted have been transferred to insure their court appearances Dec. 29.

No charges were filed at the time of the arrest, Miller said, because the investigation had not been completed. He also said that one of the women had to attend an out-of-town funeral and it was decided to postpone filing charges until the woman returned to Sedalia.

Let Down By Contract Procedures

WASHINGTON (AP) — An outspoken Navy procurement official says he's losing faith in the free enterprise system after nine years of watching the nation's largest defense contractors.

Gordon Rule says nationalization of key segments of the defense industry may eventually be an answer.

Testifying Tuesday at a congressional hearing without the usual printed statement, (he said he feared the Navy wouldn't clear one if he had written it,) Rule said President Nixon made a mistake in appointing Roy Ash, former head of Litton Industries, the nation's 11th ranking defense contractor, to direct the federal budget.

The director of the Navy Material command said former President Dwight Eisenhower would be "twitching in his grave," if he could see the way weaponry is purchased now. The military-industrial complex Eisenhower warned of nearly two decades ago, Rule said, has given way to a "military-industry-executive department complex."

In a series of rapid-fire accusations about procurement practices Rule testified before the joint Congressional Economic Committee:

—If Litton's huge shipbuilding contracts for five new helicopter assault ships continues to show insufficient progress by a Feb. 28 deadline, it should be "terminated for default."

—The management of Grumman Aircraft deliberately underbid the competition by $500 million to get the F14 jet fighter contract, then sought a "bail out" for nearly that much when it began losing money.

Rule, 65, a former Navy captain and Washington attorney said he reviews up to $8 billion in procurement each year.

"Sitting where I sit at Navy procurement, I think we've got to get away from the syndrome of 'get the contract and Uncle Sugar will someway bail us out,'" he said.

"As I see it, we have already moved to a quasi-welfare system for a few defense contractors without having the guts to tell the taxpayers we have moved to socialism," he said.

Jury Trial Is Underway For Sedalian

A 12-man jury was selected Wednesday morning to hear the case of Thomas J. Morney in Pettis County Circuit Court. Morney, 20, of 111 East Pettis, is charged with molesting a minor.

The trial was scheduled to get under way at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Circuit Court Judge Frank Meyer, after ordering the jurors from the courtroom, ruled that if a guilty verdict was entered by the jury in the case, the court — and not the jury — would determine punishment for the defendant.

This decision was based on testimony which showed that Morney was convicted April 2, 1971, on a charge of stealing property of more than $50 and subsequently sentenced to six months in the Pettis County jail.

Because Morney would qualify under the state's "habitual criminal" statutes if found guilty by the jury in this case, his sentence would be assessed by the court, Judge Meyer said.

Morney was arrested June 9 this year by Pettis County sheriff's officers in connection with a June 5 incident in which he allegedly molested a seven-year-old girl.

Since his arrest, Morney has remained in the Pettis County jail in lieu of $3,000 bond.

Jurors selected were W. C. Ream, J. L. Van Wagner, Tom Foster, Richard A. Fitzwilliam, J. W. Marcum, Robert McCarty, Chester Wissman, Clinton Lowery, Robert Pummill, Morris L. Brown, Leon Morgan and Donald Abney.

Gary Fleming, assistant county prosecutor, will serve as state's attorney in the case. Earl Crawford is defending Morney.

Truman Struggle Continues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman remains semiconscious and in very serious condition. His doctors say he cannot last indefinitely with his deteriorating kidneys performing inadequately.

At a 10 a.m. EST briefing, the hospital reported Truman was somewhat less responsive during the night but that around 9:45 a.m. he became more alert. Doctors said his over-all condition was unchanged from Tuesday and that he remained very serious.

A spokesman said Truman's kidney output for the past 24 hours was 645cc. A hospital spokesman quoted Dr. Wallace Graham, Truman's personal physician, as saying that more poison is entering the blood stream, even though kidney output is greater.

Truman's vital signs remained within normal limits, the spokesman said, with blood pressure 110-50, pulse 84, respiration 24 and temperature 97.4.

Truman's critical kidney function improved slightly Tuesday, but a spokesman for Research Hospital and Medical Center said the organs still were performing with less than 10 per cent efficiency.

"He is on sort of a plateau," said John Dreves, the hospital spokesman. "The doctors say a person cannot stay this way indefinitely ... They can't keep them (patients) functioning ... without adequate kidney function."

The 88-year-old Truman was admitted to the hospital 16 days ago, suffering from lung congestion and bronchitis. His condition deteriorated as complications of age contributed to the problems of damaged kidneys and a weakened heart.

Doctors have described his condition as very serious for the last eight days.

Truman was reported comfortable and Dreves said, "He is slightly elevated, he moves his hands about and he follows people around with his eyes."

The failing kidneys were the major concern of Truman's doctors. Because of his weakened heart and the hardening of his arteries, caused by age, the kidneys were not receiving a sufficient supply of blood.

President Nixon Gets His Physical

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon had his annual hospital physical checkup today and emerged joking, "They told me I feel fine."

Nixon spent two hours at the National Naval Medical Center in suburban Bethesda, Md., undergoing an exam that has become a Christmas season habit with him.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Walter R. Tkach, his personal physician, who accompanied him on his helicopter journey to the hospital, reported the chief executive was in excellent health.

Woman Hospitalized Following Accident

A Windsor woman was taken to Bothwell Hospital for examination and observation about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday after the car she was driving collided with another car at West Main near Prospect.

Laura Lemler, 25, was listed in good condition Wednesday by a hospital spokesman.

Police said a 1973 Chevrolet driven west on Main by the Lemler woman collided with the rear of a 1970 Plymouth driven by Donald Gerue, 213 South Gentry.

Police said the auto Gerue was driving was stopped in the westbound lane of Main when the collision occurred.

Police Court

Kenneth D. Smith, 2509 Wing, two counts of disorderly conduct, found innocent on one count and the other count was taken under advisement.

Marriage Licenses

Floyd Johnson, Jr., 1400 East 12th, and Patricia Lee Bradshaw, 2505 Kay.

Antiwar Priest Released

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — After serving more than three years of a six-year sentence, antiwar priest Philip Berrigan walked to freedom from the Federal Correctional Institution today, and was greeted by his brothers Daniel and Jerome.

About 150 persons, most of them young people, stood in fog and a drizzling rain to meet Philip Berrigan as he began his parole from a sentence for destroying draft records and smuggling letters in and out of a federal prison.

Berrigan smiled broadly as he waded into a group of waiting newsmen in the prison reception area.

"I have no regrets," he said. "It has been a very good period in my life." Berrigan added that he had mixed feelings about leaving prison at this time, because, he said, "I'm running into a continuation of the war."

Berrigan spoke only briefly with newsmen, then walked arm in arm with Daniel to a waiting station wagon which was to convey them to a nearby restaurant where they planned to say Mass together. He said he had no immediate plans beyond spending the Christmas holidays with his family.

The gray-haired, 49-year-old Josephite priest was convicted for destroying Selective Service records at Catonsville, Md., in 1968.

He was also serving concurrent sentences for a raid on draft records at Baltimore and for smuggling letters in and out of the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., while confined there.

Berrigan, who spent part of his three years in prison with his Jesuit brother, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, 51, was granted parole Nov. 29. His term was to expire Feb. 25, 1974.

Daniel Berrigan, who was sentenced to three years in prison for his part in the draft office raid at Catonsville, was released from the correctional facility here last Feb. 24. He had been in failing health with ulcers and a hernia.

Kennedy Airport Shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — A young man, taken aside after an airport X-ray machine spotted a "questionable object" in his briefcase, shot a sky marshal and a customs agent today and then was captured in a chase onto the Kennedy Airport field, an airport spokesman said.

An examination later showed the attache case contained a spiral notebook, according to police.

The sky marshal and the customs security man were reported in satisfactory condition at Peninsula General Hospital in Queens. They were shot when the man grabbed one of their guns, the spokesman said.

The hospital identified the sky marshal as Anthony Petrucci Jr., 34, of Bloomfield, N.J., and the customs man as Gerald T. McCarthy, 41, of Commack, N.Y.

The young man was identified tentatively as Robert J. Dobbelaer.

The airport spokesman said Dobbelaer was preparing at 7:55 a.m. to board a flight for San Juan at Gate 4 of the Pan American World Airways passenger terminal when an X-ray machine spotted what "appeared to have a questionable object inside."

The agents then took the man from Gate 4 to another gate without passengers, "where they prepared to search him," the spokesman continued.

At that, he grabbed one agent's gun and shot them both, then ran onto the rain-soaked tarmac, the spokesman said.

He also dropped the briefcase, the gun and other baggage he was carrying, according to a Pan American spokesman.

Two policemen from the New York Port Authority airport squad captured him.

Sedalia Police Investigate Thefts

Police investigated three reports Tuesday.

Debra Cason, 457 West Saline, reported someone took a portable television from her home between noon and 5 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Ray Schultz, 235 East Jackson, reported someone removed 17 stereo tapes and his tape player, collectively valued at $192, from his car while it was parked in the State Fair Community College between 9 a.m. and noon Tuesday.

Mrs. Alvin Smith, 630 East 16th, reported 26 outdoor lights were taken from her front yard sometime Monday or Tuesday.

Appeals Proposal Is Opposed By Arthur Goldberg

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Supreme court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg says he is opposed to the creation of a new National Court of Appeals and has "grave doubts about its constitutionality."

The proposal came Tuesday from a panel of law experts. "The court is now at the saturation point, if not actually overwhelmed," said the chairman, Prof. Paul Freund of Harvard.

As a result, the committee recommended that Congress set up the new court to screen virtually all of the appeals that now go to the Supreme Court—more than 3,500 a year.

Goldberg, who sat on the court from 1962 to 1965, said in an Associated Press interview that he disagrees with the idea.

"The Constitution of the United States says there shall be a Supreme Court," he said. "It does not contemplate in my opinion that there should be a Supreme Court and a subordinate Supreme Court."

The former justice said his second reason for opposing the proposal is that the court "has adequate means within the existing law to screen out frivolous cases." He went on:

"While the number seems very great to the layman, the court is well-schooled in dealing with such a problem."

Goldberg said he read every petition filed in the court during his years there. "I made my own decisions, not my clerks," he added. "I did not find it burdensome."

In its report, the committee said: "It is satisfying to believe that the most untutored and poorest prisoner can have his complaints or petitions considered by a federal judge, and ultimately by the Supreme Court of the United States."

However, it added, "We are, in truth, fostering an illusion. What the prisoner really has access to is the necessarily fleeting attention of a judge or a law clerk."

More than 3,650 cases reached the court last year. Under the committee plan, all except the half-dozen or so that are strictly disputes between two states would go instead to the new National Court of Appeals, to be set up by Congress.

Most would be rejected. Some, particularly cases involving conflicting decisions by the federal appeals courts, would be decided by the new court and its rulings would be final. The appeals considered to be most important, some 400 to 450 a year, would be sent up to the Supreme Court for decision.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, particularly, has suggested that the court is overloaded and steps should be taken to ease its burdens.

Justice William O. Douglas, on the other hand, has said the court actually is underworked—that while the number of cases filed has gone up the number of cases accepted for decision by written opinion has not increased.

The new court would have seven members, drawn by rotation for staggered three-year terms from the 11 federal appeals courts.

Corps Is Planning Three New Parks

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — Three parks costing $13 million are to be constructed by the Army Corps of Engineers in Clay County next spring.

The work, at the proposed Smithville Lake, will encompass 12,022 acres at Crow's Creek Branch, 1,630 acres at Camp Branch and 1,515 acres at Little Platte.

The contract calls for the county to borrow $6.43 million on a 50-year loan from the federal government. The balance of the financing will be paid by the government.

Authority To State By EPA

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Environmental Protection Agency officials announced Tuesday they have granted the state of Missouri authority to issue waste discharge permits, which must be obtained by cities, industries and agricultural concerns before they can discharge waste into navigable waters.

The EPA said Missouri's authority expires March 18 but would probably be extended on a permanent basis before that date. The agency said it hopes all states eventually will have the authority to grant their own permits.

EPA Regional Director Jerome Svore said the authority does not change the basic relationship between cities, industries and the state. In the past, the state has been expected to encourage cities to build sewage treatment facilities and crack down on industrial polluters.

This relationship is expected to continue under the new federal Water Pollution Control Act. Industries and cities still will look to the state for guidance and the state will be responsible for pollution control, he said.

Svore said there is a new set of rules the states, cities and industries must adhere to, and the EPA will conduct audits of the state permit programs to see that antipollution measures are being enforced.

Slight Increase

Sales tax receipts returning to the Sedalia from the period of Oct. 25 to Nov. 22 totaled $74,445.82, City Clerk Ralph Dedrick said Tuesday. The total, Dedrick added, is approximately $80 more than was collected over the same time span a year ago.

The latest monthly payment brings to $810,878.72 the amount of sales tax revenue collected by the city this year.

Transport Lacking For Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transporation is not sufficient to move enough heating oil to five Midwestern states in time to solve a fuel-shortage caused by the need to dry grains before they spoil, federal officials have concluded.

A combination of heavy rain and late maturing grains has left grain-storage operators in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska with grains that cannot be stored until dried. And a cold spell that has caused increased residential heating demands has cut into fuel supplies needed to dry the grain.

Some fuel oil will be rushed to the affected areas in railroad tankers, a spokesman for the Office of Emergency Preparedness said Tuesday, but there are not enough cars to transport all that is needed.

Officials from the Office of Oil and Gas, department of Transportation, federal Power Commission, Commerce Department, Interstate Commerce Commission and the OEP met Tuesday with representatives of 11 pipeline companies to determine what could be done.

"A lot is going to depend on old mother nature," the spokesman said. He added if a warming trend in the area continues, the problem could ease.

New Uniforms—Finally

After an eight week delay, the new St. Louis County policewomen finally got their uniforms. Patrolwoman Casey Carter looks over her assignment with Sgt. William Blake. St. Louis County has recently recruited nine women to be patrolwomen. (UPI)

Warrants Issued In Murder Case

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Murder and armed robbery warrants were issued by the circuit attorney's office here Tuesday against Ricardo Jacobs, 20, for the fatal shooting of a St. Louis police officer.

Patrolman Harold Warnecke, 60, was fatally wounded Friday morning when he answered an armed robbery alarm at a St. Louis food store. Warnecke was shot by one of two robbers who were leaving the store following the holdup.

Schedule Carpenter Testimony

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Testimony was scheduled to resume Wednesday in the first-degree murder trial of Eben W. (Bill) Carpenter, accused in the slaying of Topeka security guard Willis Upshaw.

Shawnee County Prosecutor Gene Olander said in his opening statement Tuesday the state would prove Carpenter arranged as an alibi to be in Kansas City the night Upshaw was slain.

Olander said evidence would show Carpenter and his brother, Jan C. Carpenter, 29, took out a $50,000 life insurance policy on Upshaw in May, then took out two additional policies totaling $70,000 in June.

The prosecutor said the state would also show Jan Carpenter called his brother from a Lake of the Ozarks resort and instructed him to take two rifles to a shed for storage near where the shooting occurred later.

Upshaw's bullet-riddled body was found July 2 at Lake Sherwood Estates near Topeka. The state alleges the rifles were used by Donald Brenner in the shooting.

The state alleges that Bill Carpenter, Jan C. Carpenter, Miss Karen Larson, 20, and Brenner conspired and carried out the killing of Upshaw.

Jan Carpenter last week interrupted his first-degree murder trial and pleaded guilty to reduced charges of second-degree murder.

Olander told the jury that Brenner would be the state's main witness in the Bill Carpenter trial.

Defense attorney Ernest Rice said Jan Carpenter will be a defense witness. The trial is being held in Johnson County District Court on a change of venue.

Apollo 17 Smoothest Of Program Endeavors

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — It stuttered at the start, but once it left earth Apollo 17 was the smoothest, the most trouble-free of all the moon landings.

A computer-driven device halted the Apollo 17 countdown and stalled the launch for two hours, 40 minutes. It got off finally, at 12:33 a.m. EST, Dec. 7, and rose on a tail of fire which cut through the black Florida sky and turned midnight into dawn.

From then on it was smooth space sailing — with only minor irritations — for the two Navy men and the civilian scientist of the last Apollo flight.

Every other moon landing mission had at least one major problem, and an incident on one flight nearly cost the lives of three spacemen.

On Apollo 11, the first moon landing, an overloaded computer aboard the lunar module gave false abort signals, but Mission Control overruled the computer and the landing was a success.

On Apollo 12, the lunar module was targeted toward a large crater and the astronauts had to overfly it to land, and plans for television scanning of the lunar surface went awry when the astronauts pointed the camera at the sun and ruined the lens.

On Apollo 13, an oxygen tank exploded 200,000 miles from earth on the flight toward the moon. The astronauts were forced to board the attached lunar module to survive long enough to return to earth. The mission is considered the only Apollo failure.

On Apollo 14, the astronauts had trouble docking the command and lunar modules shortly after leaving earth orbit. They went on to accomplish a successful moon landing.

On Apollo 15, they had difficulty separating the command module and the lunar module while in moon orbit prior to landing. Plumbing aboard the craft leaked, the astronauts suffered cardiac irregularities on the moon and a parachute collapsed just before splashdown.

Apollo 16 had to be cut short when a part of the command ship's main rocket engine failed to work properly in lunar orbit. It prevented an orbit-changing firing which was necessary for safety's sake before a landing could be permitted. The problem was subsequently solved and the landing was allowed to proceed, but the astronauts returned to earth sooner than planned.

Beside such problems, the Apollo 17 difficulties seem small. A fender on the moon car broke off and the astronauts improvised another. All three astronauts suffered from minor gastric distress. And some of the scientific instruments did not operate precisely as planned.

Additionally, a pair of scissors were lost. They were never found. And the wiring in a headset used to communicate with earth broke. It was repaired.

Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, the director of the Manned Spacecraft Center at Houston, summed it all up: "I've never seen a more perfect space flight than this."

Will Present Findings From Basin Study

(Democrat-Capital Service)

CONCORDIA — The Department of Agriculture and the Water Resources Board will present their findings from a Blackwater-Lamine River Basin study at a meeting at the Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. Building here at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 3.

The information to be presented will cover economic studies and projections, the existing environment of the basin and the effects of development on the environment.

Also to be discussed is detailed information regarding the feasibility of watershed programs with emphasis to be placed on the Blackwater Basin, it was reported by Clifford L. Summers, acting executive director of the Water Resources Board.

Mining Accord Reached

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — A tentative agreement was reached in federal court Tuesday night between representatives of the Peabody Coal Mining Co., and miners from two Southern Illinois unions which struck the company Monday after two employes were fired.

The agreement, which must be ratified by both United Mine Workers Union Local 1513 and 1602 came after a four-hour hearing in U.S. District Court. The hearing was originally scheduled to consider a request by Peabody for a contempt of court citation against one of the unions.

The agreement calls for binding arbitration on the "underlying issue," the firing of the Peabody employes for alleged absenteeism.

More than 4,000 miners were idled when the strike spread throughout Southern Illinois after two miners were fired at the company's mines in Gallatin County. The strike began there and spread to nine other mines.

Tom Gumbel, attorney for the unions, said following the agreement Tuesday night that if union members and Peabody accept the proposal for binding arbitration, the Gallatin County miners will return to work not later than 8 a.m. Thursday.

Farm Roundup

Hog Production Word Is Expected Friday

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department will release on Friday new estimates on hog production, including a look at how farrowings are shaping up for next spring.

The report will be based on soundings taken Dec. 1 and will provide the first USDA national hog production figures through next May. Last September, the department reported farrowing intentions for Corn Belt producers through February.

In the September report, the department estimated that Corn Belt farmers would have seven per cent more sows give birth to pigs during the December-February period, the increase attributed to higher hog prices and relatively lower feed costs.

Although hog prices still are running close to $10 per hundredweight higher than a year ago — they averaged $29.89 at Omaha during the week ended Dec. 9 — corn and other feed have risen in price. Also, poor weather has cut harvests in some areas and could have a big impact on many producers' plans for hogs next year.

Despite rising feed costs, which can tempt a grain producer to sell rather than feed it to his stock, the government's hog-corn ratio, which measures relative prices, still is running the highest in years.

The ratio, which expresses in bushels the amount of corn equal in value to 100 pounds of liveweight hog, has been over 20 most of this year, a level believed high enough to trigger substantial expansion in the swine industry.

In November, the ratio was 22.3 nationally, up from 21.8 in October and 19.3 a year earlier. Two years ago — when 1970 hog production flooded the markets and a smaller, blight-damaged corn crop drove up feed costs — the ratio was 11.9.

The report next Friday, while including the important Corn Belt pig intentions, also is being anticipated for its estimates in the lesser hog states.

Mind Your Money

Giving Choices Best Method

By PETER WEAVER

Q — I am a father in a co-operative kindergarten and am trying to teach a course on consumerism. In a previous column you said children could learn about money and advertising at any early age.

How do I explain advertising to 5- and 6-year-olds? — C.L., San Diego, Calif.

A — Dr. Carol Seefeldt, an early childhood education expert at the University of Maryland, says you must begin by "giving the children exercises in analytical thinking." She says you can't just say this is right, that is wrong. You must give the pupils a lot of choices. Build on a basis of choicemaking so something is not accepted just because someone (or an advertisement) says it's true.

After exercises in choicemaking, Dr. Seefeldt says you can go right into specific TV commercials and printed ads. She says one group saw a commercial which showed a little girl eating a candy that was not supposed to melt in her hands, just in her mouth. They tried it and found the candy did, indeed, melt in your hands.

Another group sent in for a toy advertised on a cereal box. It was not nearly as big and as easy to work as the ad led them to believe. You need to bring a TV set into class to look at the commercials and bring in cereal boxes and other ads.

You may be able to get more classroom material ideas by writing: Action for Children's TV, 46 Auston St., Newtonville, Mass. This group has been instrumental in tuning out or toning down certain TV commercials aimed at children.

Q — I recently received a brochure in the mail that offered to sell me insurance for my young son at a fantastically low price. Are these offers legitimate? — H.S., Laurel, Md.

A — You can check on the company through your state's insurance commission. As for the "fantastically low price," it's fairly standard throughout the industry. You get a low premium rate until the insured reaches age 26 or 20. Then the rate is readjusted upward.

What they don't tell you is the fact that most children are good risks and therefore should get low rates on insurance. They also don't tell you that, for most people, getting insurance for children is a waste of money. You need insurance on yourself if you're the family breadwinner. Insurance should protect dependents. Who are your child's "dependents"?

Q — Since we put an air conditioner in the living room, the paint has been peeling off the walls. We scraped and repainted but it's peeling again. What's the answer? — Mrs. S.L., Tarentum, Pa.

A — Have a serviceman check your air conditioner to make sure that it's functioning properly. Air conditioners should take humidity out of the air and moisture is what makes paint peel. Make sure the walls are getting proper ventilation.

Then, scrape off the old paint and repaint with a latex base primer and a latex base finishing paint. Latex is more compatible with moisture and should not peel.

Q — Is soy lecithin good for the relief of arthritis? — Mrs. M.D.J., Machias, Me.

A — No. For more information, check with your local Arthritis Foundation or write to headquarters at 1212 Avenue of Americas, New York, N.Y.

Two-Way Troubled By Booze

MIAMI, Okla. (AP) — When they talk about Two-Way here, they don't talk about the 13-year-old horse being front of a wagon, but rather on one.

Two-Way has this thing about drinking.

Grady Morrison of Miami says his animal, the offspring of a registered Appaloosa and a "plain old mare" earned the name because he was obtained in a trade for a two-way radio.

"Two-Way will drink up to three six-packs a day," says Morrison. "His favorite brand is Coors and he wants Fleischman's bourbon with his 7-Up." He disdains other brands.

Morrison said he once accepted a bet from a liquor salesman and offered Two-way a fifth of Vodka.

"He drank it down without stopping and didn't even stagger," Morrison said. "But he really doesn't care for it."

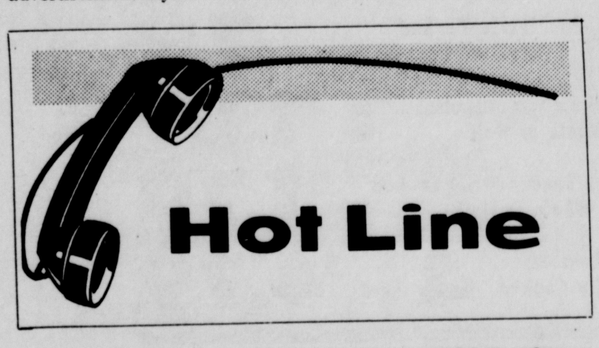

But drinking doesn't disturb Two-Way's disposition.

"He's gentle as can be with kids," said Morrison. "I've seen as many as five little kids on him, with him just walking around with no bridle or anything.

"When he gets tired of them, he just walks up to the fence and stands there till they get down."

Morrison said he has given Two-Way away "a hundred times.

"Every kid in town owns him. I tell them, 'sure, you can have him ... but you have to leave him here'."

Q — I would like to suggest an improvement in the flow of traffic at Smith-Cotton. I think Massachusetts should be made one way two or three blocks further south. There is always someone trying to go south when the majority of cars are going north to drop off students, and there just isn't room for two cars to pass with parking on both sides of the streets. Cars waiting to go south tie up the intersections. I have tried going different routes and none move along. Leaving the high school is no problem now that it's one way or no parking on one side. The junior high drive should be one way also. — Mrs. A.M.

A — City Engineer Robert Cunningham, a member of the Citizens Traffic Advisory Committee, said the idea of extending one-way traffic beyond 10th street has not been proposed by the board because "the street is then in a strictly residential area and we don't feel it's right to do that on strictly residential streets." He added, however, that the committee would welcome any comments or observations from interested or concerned parties.

Smith-Cotton High School principal Earl Finley said he "wasn't aware of the situation because I enter (the school) from another way," but said he welcomed your comments. He said he would convey your views to the traffic committee on behalf of the school if he determined the suggestion was valid.

Larry Smithson, junior high principal, said the driveway in front of the school "is pretty well one way right now facing north." According to Smithson, no signs will be erected until the completion of a new one-way road leading from the south edge of the current parking lot to 24th street. Inclement weather is delaying the completion of the project.

Q — Tuesday evening my husband and I were west-bound on Broadway, east of Engineer, when an ambulance passed us in the other west-bound lane. He was obviously speeding and had no red light on. When he got to Broadway and Engineer he ran the red light and continued west on Broadway to Kentucky, where he turned into the Christmas tree sales lot. Was it legal for him to run a red light and speed while not on an emergency call?—Mrs. R. D.

A — According to both Missouri statutes and Sedalia ordinances, no vehicle can legally exceed the speed limit. Exceptions are made for emergency vehicles only when they are used in emergency situations.

The events you describe apparently do not fit in this category, unless some sort of emergency existed at the Christmas tree sales lot and the ambulance was used for official business. When ambulances, police cars and other emergency vehicles are used for other than emergency purposes, they must obey existing traffic regulations. Even when used in emergencies, some authorities, most notably doctors, have said that driving at normal speeds is often better for a patient than when ambulances travel more rapidly.

Docking Promises Measure on Taxes

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Gov. Robert Docking has told legislative leaders he will have a bill to carry out his circuit breaker tax recommendations ready for introduction early in the 1973 legislative session.

The governor and leaders of the Republican majority in the legislature failed to agree in a meeting Tuesday on where they will hold conferences during the session.

Docking said he thought the meetings should be at the executive mansion, Cedar Crest, several miles from the statehouse, because it is a quieter place.

Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Prairie Village, the president pro-tem designate, said the GOP leaders want official meetings to be in the statehouse, and that it would be burdensome to the legislators to travel to the mansion because of the distance and time involved.

Docking told the leaders he will make recommendations early on school finance and said he plans to deliver a joint legislative and budget message during the first week of the session.

Newsmen were not allowed to attend the meeting but were given briefings by the governor and the Republican leaders and a news release from Docking's office.

Docking said he told the legislators that property tax relief "is a major issue facing all of us."

On the circuit breaker proposal, Docking said he has received "tremendous support from the people" and he would hope it would receive "priority attention this session."

Bennett and Rep. Duane McGill, new speaker of the House, said it was agreed there would be future meetings between the governor and legislative leaders, but no time was set for the next.

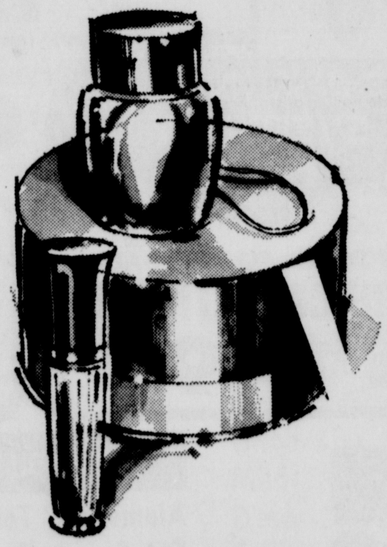

Docking said the meetings will be set "when needed for discussion of specific issues."

Bennett said the leaders asked Docking to submit specific bills to carry out his recommendations, including the circuit breaker and school finance proposals.

McGill said they assured the governor there would be no problem in getting his bills introduced in one or the other branches of the legislature.

Controversy, Myth and Misuse Surround Nation's Vitamin Consumption

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The word vitamin comes from a Latin word, vita, for life itself, and indeed vitamins are of vital importance to growth and health. But, like many of the other things in life, they are surrounded by controversy, myth and misuse.

The misuse came into the news in recent days when the federal Food and Drug Administration proposed to restrict the potentially dangerous use of vitamins A and D in some treatments.

The problem with vitamins A and D illustrates the approach to vitamins taken by many people and cited repeatedly by scientists: "If these vitamins are good for me, even vital, then why won't more of the vitamins be even better?"

In the case of A and D, the answer is simple: It has been proven that excessive or massive doses actually can be harmful. Part of the problem with these vitamins is that the body tends to store them.

Further, according to one expert, there is very little evidence available on the effects of massive doses of any vitamin. There is little evidence available of the effects of massive doses over a long period of time — of what the cumulative effect might be.

The classic example of vitamin controversy is the contention by the two-time Nobel prize winner, Dr. Linus Pauling, that a lot of vitamin C can protect against, and fight, the common cold.

Other claims for vitamins include those for vitamin E, which is enjoying a relatively new popularity. Vitamin E, the claims run, can do many things, such as ward off heart disease and increase sexual potency. These claims are widely discounted by vitamin experts.

There are some who believe vitamins play a role in the treatment of mental illness. Dr. Pauling has coined the term "orthomolecular psychiatry," a method of treating mental illness by correcting the balance of vitamins and other natural substances in the body.

This approach to mental illness, however, is regarded with great skepticism by many scientists.

For most people, the concern about vitamins is simply one of maintaining a state of general health and well being.

Because vitamins are found in small quantities in almost all foods, a well balanced diet is of great importance in maintaining good health. Indeed, it is said repeatedly, that a well balanced daily diet is sufficient to maintain normal health.

But it has also been pointed out that there are millions of Americans whose diet is a disaster due to poor eating habits or poverty or other factors.

The soda-pop and potato-chip emphasis in the diet of many teen-agers, regardless of economic level, has been cited many times. And others, such as pregnant women, must pay special attention to their diet. A physician's advice is necessary in many cases.

In addition to inadequate diets, there are vitamin problems caused by the failure of the body, in some individuals, to absorb nutrients properly. Some people require more than the average, some less.

The Food and Drug Administration's proposals on vitamins A and D do not concern these problems, but those of overdose. The agency said overdoses of vitamin A can cause various complications, ranging from growth retardation in children to headaches and cracked skin. The possible complications from vitamin D overdoses range from high blood pressure to kidney failure and death.

"Widespread promotion of both vitamins has resulted in "excessive use for conditions such as acne, night blindness and arthritis," according to the FDA statement. The FDA said "Neither vitamin A nor D are proven effective for these conditions in well nourished people."

In the case of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling's claim about the common cold was met with widespread skepticism in the scientific community and great public acceptance. Much of the criticism centered on what was said to be a lack of large scale studies to support his contention.

A recently reported study from the University of Toronto has been described as encouraging by the scientists who conducted it, enough so that they have planned an even larger trial this winter.

There were two major findings in the Toronto study:

—Of 407 volunteers who took 1,000 milligrams daily, 26 per cent remained free of illness throughout the study, compared with 18 per cent of the 411 persons on dummy pills.

—The volunteers who got vitamin C had 30 per cent fewer days of total disability than those in the placebo group.

The 818 subjects were in the program for at least two months, according to the support.

"Further studies," the Toronto researchers said, "will of course be required to confirm this finding and establish its magnitude more precisely, but the high level of statistical significance associated with it encourages us to believe that it is likely to be a real effect rather than a statistical artifact."

More Than Semantics Holding Up Settlement For Vietnam Conflict

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The disagreements Henry A. Kissinger says are holding up a Vietnam settlement are more than problems of semantics. They go to the heart of what the war is about and make it unlikely there will be peace any time soon.

For the remaining two issues concern the political control of the South. In other words, should South Vietnam be guaranteed the right of an existence independent of North Vietnam.

Kissinger, in his first public discussion of the negotiations with the North Vietnamese since his Oct. 26 statement that "peace is at hand," refused to discuss the substance of the troublesome details.

But he inched close on several occasions in his Saturday news conference. "We wanted," he said, "some reference in the agreement, somehow, however elusive, however indirect, which would make clear that the two parts of Vietnam would live in peace with each other and that neither side would impose its solution on the other by force."

North Vietnam has always insisted there is only one Vietnam and the Saigon regime has subverted the Geneva agreement ending the war with France by insisting on a separate life.

In Hanoi's eyes, the demilitarized zone at the 17th parallel is not a permanent international boundary but only a temporary truce marker.

In the first of the nine points outlined in the tentative agreement, the United States agreed to language that seemed to support this view:

"The United States respects the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam as recognized by the 1954 Geneva agreements."

Both sides say the October agreement was final on this point, and now each accuses the other of recanting.

Who changed position is uncertain. What is clear is that neither Kissinger nor his Hanoi counterpart, Le Duc Tho, had the same concept about the meaning of the tentative accord.

The United States is seeking a settlement with enough political stability to provide a "decent interval" between the end of the fighting and any resumption of conflict.

This decent interval would give South Vietnam time to establish itself in the countryside and the United States time to escape blame for a sellout of its ally if and when the conflict resumes.

Hanoi wants a cease-fire with a loose understanding of the political agreement so it can continue its military support of its Viet Cong ally.

Thus, when Kissinger said, "We have an agreement that is 99 per cent completed ... we are only one decision away from a settlement," he was talking only of quantity.

For Hanoi to give Kissinger what he wants on this point would remove any claim it would have for legitimately intervening in the South if Saigon and the Viet Cong start fighting again.

That the settlement is broken down over this crucial point is supported by a disagreement over a "technical" point, as outlined by Kissinger.

This deals with an international force to supervise a cease-fire. According to Kissinger, "Our estimate was that several thousand people were needed to monitor many provisions of the agreement.

"The North Vietnam perception is that the total force should be no more than 250, of which nearly half should be located at headquarters; that it would be dependent for its communication, logistics and even physical necessities entirely on the party in whose area it was located."

Hanoi's demand supports the observation that North Vietnam is not interested in a tightly controlled and permanent peace. Further, Hanoi is aware that the failure of the International Control Commission to supervise the Geneva agreements effectively was due in part to its lack of size and mobility.

Both the United States and Vietnamese stands on the nature of the agreement seem to result in part from the role played by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu since the Oct. 26 disclosures.

Thieu demanded that all North Vietnamese troops pull out of the South, that the 17th parallel be re-established as a permanent border and demilitarized zone and that his government be acknowledged as having full and unlimited sovereignty.

Though Kissinger said Saturday that "none of these U.S. proposals had asked for a withdrawal of North Vietnamese forces," it appears Kissinger did press Le Duc Tho on the other issues raised by Saigon.

"We cannot make a settlement which brings peace to North Vietnam and maintains the war in South Vietnam," he said and added "the fundamental point" that there must be insurance "the two parts of Vietnam would live in peace with each other."

The North, some diplomatic sources say, viewed this American position as a change forced by Thieu. If Kissinger switched on this, one source said, Hanoi may have felt he could not be trusted on other issues. Therefore, North Vietnam hardened and sought more strictly worded provisions.

The negotiations are not over, according to both Tho and Kissinger. But if the Paris talks are to end the conflict, one side or the other will have to make a major change in position.

High Court Will Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has agreed to rule on the government's power to use a 19th century federal refuse law to bring criminal action against industrial polluters of the nation's navigable waters.

About 200 suits depend on the outcome of the case accepted Monday for review this spring.

The government is seeking to overturn a decision by the U.S. Circuit Court in Philadelphia that limited the scope of the law. The Justice Department's appeal complained that the lower court had stood the law on its head and emasculated what Congress had in mind in 1899 when it prohibited dumping of all refuse except common liquid sewage into navigable waters.

The case concerns the conviction last year of the Pennsylvania Industrial Chemical Corp. for passing iron and aluminum solids and compounds into the Monongahela River. The firm was fined $10,000.

Last May, however, in a 2-1 ruling, the Philadelphia court said the firm was being punished for not obtaining a permit when no broad permit system existed. A new trial was ordered.

Since then, the U.S. Circuit Court in Boston has read the law the way the government prefers in the case of a Manchester, N.H., slaughtering plant convicted of polluting the Merrimack River. The Supreme Court evidently has decided to resolve the conflict in interpretations.

In other decisions before beginning a three-week holiday recess, the justices:

1. Ended compulsory chapel at the Army, Navy and Air Force academies by turning down a government appeal from a ruling by a lower court that the regulations violate the First Amendment's ban against establishment of religion. The government contended future officers required "an appreciation of our moral and religious heritage." The rejection was unanimous.

2. Broadly upheld the power of the states to regulate local operations of out-of-state firms. The 8-0 ruling approved South Carolina's assessment of $21,540 in income taxes against Heublein, Inc., a Connecticut liquor firm.

3. Agreed to decide whether the Interstate Commerce Commission should have fully considered the impact on the environment when it raised freight rates in a way that made it more expensive to ship scrap iron and steel destined for recycling.

4. Gave the government authority to check out the names of all contributors to a domestic organization allegedly linked to Irish insurgents. The vote was 6-3.

5. Rejected an appeal by former Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack P. F. Gremillion, who was convicted of perjury to a federal grand jury investigating a bankrupt loan company. He faces three years in prison.

Who Are The Humans Involved in Programs of Experimentation?

By JEAN HELLER
Associated Press Writer

Behind the stone walls and iron bars of California's maximum security prison, there are special cellblocks for the violent, the self-destructive, the belligerent.

These places are called adjustment centers. They are, in fact, solitary confinement.

At the California Medical Facility attached to the maximum security prison at Vacaville, Calif., doctors and corrections officials have created the Lister Unit, an experiment in criminal rehabilitation.

From adjustment centers across the state, the Lister Unit takes volunteers who are willing to go through the program's four-phase rehabilitation process which, in theory at least, prepares inmates for a return to normal, or mainline, prison life.

But are the prisoners truly volunteers?

They are told exactly what will happen to them at the Lister Unit. They have the option to go or stay and, once in Vacaville, they may pull out of the program at any time. The principles of informed consent are meticulously followed.

But what options do the prisoners have? If they don't try the Lister Unit, the only alternative is life in adjustment centers. There may be a subtle, unintentional force at work which some researchers call invisible coercion.

It is not only a problem at Vacaville, but in many places where human beings consent to volunteer their minds and bodies for medical, sociological and psychological research. It is created by the nature of the people who volunteer, people who in many cases, live in controlled, rigid environments where rewards and fears are far more significant than they are for the average citizen.

The controversy is whether these people can ever give free and open consent.

The prisoner may think his consent will look good on his prison record and enhance his chances for parole or he may be drawn by the promise of compensation for his time. The soldier approached for defense research may fear the wrath of his superiors if he refuses to volunteer. The critically ill cancer patient may be so desperate that he cannot make a rational decision on participating in the testing of a dangerous new cancer treatment.

In an Associated Press study of human experimentation researchers said they face these dilemmas every day, but so far have not been able to solve them.

Dr. Thomas C. Smith is director of pharmacology for Parke-Davis, a drug house headquartered in Detroit. Along with the Upjohn Co., Parke-Davis runs a clinic inside Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson. The two companies have 1,400 prisoners who have volunteered to act as human subjects for new drug tests.

Smith said in an interview he is acutely aware of the chance that some invisible coercion is involved in the prisoners' motives.

"There's no way to prove or disprove it, no way of saying there isn't some subconscious desire to impress prison authorities," he said.

At Southern Michigan, prisoners learn of the drug-testing program through the prison newspaper. There is no contact by authorities until the prisoners have sought them out.

In all prison testing with the exception of internal programs like California's Lister Unit, prisoners are compensated for their efforts. This, too, has been part of the invisible coercion controversy.

"There's a thin line between paying a man fairly and offering so much that the compensation is his incentive to volunteer," said Gus Harrison, former head of the Michigan Department of Corrections.

"In the case of Southern Michigan, the state set the compensation scales after carefully considering the problems. It's low enough that I don't think it constitutes any incentive in and of itself."

Drugs given inmates are only those deemed by the two pharmaceutical houses and the watchdog committee to be completely safe. Drugs which affect heart rate or the dangerous cancer treatments are never tested on inmates, or any other normal healthy people according to Dr. Harry Demissianos, director of experimental medicine for Upjohn.

"There are certain things we never test on normals," he said. "Take a cancer drug. Most of them are so toxic they are really poisonous. You'd never give them to normal people. You go directly to the patient where there is no choice, where the patient is moribund and is going to die and is in a desperate situation."

Which only brings up another dilemma for researchers. Who has a right to speak for those who cannot physically, mentally or legally volunteer themselves? Experimentation subjects falling into this category would include the desperately ill, the mentally incompetent and children.

That family members can give permission for so-called desperation treatment for the critically ill and mentally incompetent has been widely accepted for many years. Clinical research on children is a can of worms all its own.

Experts are unanimous in the opinion that a doctor cannot scale down an adult dose of medicine for a child with any certainty of the child's reaction. Yet child-testing is almost never done in clinical research. And some research into children's diseases has been hampered by scientists' reluctance and some legal restraints on experimenting with minors.

"The basic assumption that is made by many laymen is that there is no need to do research on children because you can do it on adults and then scale it down," said Dr. Donald T. Chalkley, chief of the Institutional Relations Section, Division of Research Grants of the National Institutes of Health.

"But it won't work. A child is not a little adult. The physiology of a child is not even the same as the physiology of a baby."

But child studies are difficult to do, partly because of a 1944 Supreme Court decision severely limiting those things for which a parent can volunteer a child.

"Parents may be free to become martyrs themselves," Associate Justice Wiley B. Rutledge wrote. "But it does not follow they are free, in identical circumstances, to make martyrs of their children before they have reached the age of full and legal discretion when they can make that choice for themselves."

The general tendency among researchers and the courts has been to interpret this decision to mean that no research can be done on a child that is not of direct benefit to that child.

Nonetheless, the Food and Drug Administration is considering accepting no new drug or therapy that has not first been tested and proven on children.

And so the dilemmas go. They are not near any resolution. They may never be resolved. But human experimentation will go on.

"We have to use man in experiments as a subject," Dr. Zarafonetis said. "There's no one else but man. We will do everything we can to find experimental models, but we can't find models for everything.

"Society has too big a stake in its own future to allow human testing to go under on an emotional binge or uninformed basis. We've got to work out a method that's fair to everyone with a minimum of risk.

"But there will always be some risk. That's the price of progress."

Weaving Replaces Business

TORONTO (AP) — Three years ago advertising executive Ray Senior decided enough was ENOUGH.

He opted out of the rat race and became a weaver.

In Toronto for the opening of a new craft boutique where his woven wallhangings are sold, Senior now calls himself an "environmentalist."

As president of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Co., he said his life was a combination of high-priced decisions and elegant dinner parties.

"I told the people at the office I was going to be an environmentalist," he said. "They told me I was crazy."

He moved to Hudson, Que., made a country home into a studio and then got to work with the weaver's loom and potter's wheel.

"I think it was hard at first for my wife to adjust from the life of an executive's wife to the wife of an artist, but now she's into the artistic thing herself," he said.

Senior said he probably works harder now than he did as an advertising man.

His big problem now, he said, is not to get carried away with his success so that he's producing art work the way he once churned out executive decisions in the advertising world.

Wedding Cake Poses Big Problem

By POLLY CRAMER
Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I need advice from readers who have baked and decorated cakes. I promised to bake a wedding cake for a neighbor's daughter but have never before handled the large 14- and 16-inch layers. Can anyone tell me the easiest way to handle these layers without breaking them when trying to put one on top of the other. What kind of recipe can one use to make a cake with a good body and to be used in tiers? I have never assembled such a cake at a church or transported one. If anyone has any secrets about this please pass them on. I do not want this cake to be a flop. Also, my icing roses do not want to stand up so I must get the frosting too stiff or too thin. Any suggestions will be appreciated. I need help desperately. — MRS. D.A.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering the reader who wanted to remove a smoky (pipe and cigarette) smell from her upholstered furniture. For years we have used cold water and ammonia (clear) to freshen up our furniture and rugs, too. Also, there is nothing better than ammonia for washing windows. — MRS. E.O.

DEAR GIRLS — A tablespoon or so of ammonia in a small open bowl of water will dissipate tobacco odors and can be left out all the time. When trying the ammonia and water on upholstered furniture do first test on an inconspicuous spot and be careful not to soak the pice. — POLLY

Drummer Boy Spread

Holiday Cheese Spread ...
... decorative and tasty

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

The holidays are really the "big cheese" for those who enjoy giving and receiving presents. Why not, then, make it a time of enjoying a very special cheese and liverwurst spread cocoction that all ages will enjoy.

DRUMMER BOY SPREAD
2 4¾ ounce cans liverwurst spread
2 8 ounce packages cream cheese, softened
4 ounces camembert cheese
2 tablespoons crumbled blue cheese
1 teaspoon lime juice
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ cup chopped pecans

Reserving four ounces of cream cheese for decoration, combine remaining ingredients except pecans. On waxed paper, shape cheese mixture into a cylinder resembling a drum. Once chilled, smooth edges and top of drum with a knife. Roll curved edges of drum in nuts. Place on serving dish and then decorate with remaining cream cheese. Serve with your favorite crackers. Makes about 3½ cups spread.

May Ruin the Holidays

NEW YORK (AP) — Good will toward mankind peaks during the Christmas holidays until the burglar — who does some of his best business during the season — shatters the mood by helping himself to presents under someone else's tree.

"Just as caroling, Yule logs and decorated evergreens have become tradition, so have stories of families finding their homes plundered, gifts stolen and Christmas mood destroyed," says Aulton D. Mullendore, loss control expert for Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

"The danger that your holiday will be spoiled by a thief is increased because there is usually more to be stolen and better opportunities for the burglar to ply his trade," Mullendore said.

Seasonal visiting, parties, last minute shopping and fewer daylight hours all leave the home wide open for burglary.

Deterrents to burglars during the holiday are just as effective at any other time of the year, he said.

Steps to protect homes include providing plenty of light. Shadows give thieves a place to work.

Make the home look occupied, even when it isn't. Leave a light burning and don't allow home deliveries to pile up.

Provide good locks. They won't guarantee a house won't be entered, but they do provide enough of an irritant to make a thief look for easier victims.

Request local police to make patrol checks of the home, whether it's occupied or not.

CWC To Have Christmas Program

"Christmas Craft" by Mrs. Wilford Acker and a Christmas musical program given by the Smith-Cotton "New Score" Singers, under the direction of Tom Trout, will be features of the Thursday dinner meeting of the Sedalia Christian Business and Professional Women's Council at Flat Creek Inn.

All persons from the Sedalia area are welcomed to the 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting where Mrs. Llyn Conrad, wife of a college geology professor will give a talk on the true meaning of Christmas.

Reservations may be made by calling 826-6077.

Talking With Santa

Santa Claus visited the Tuesday Christmas party for children of State School No. 21, listening to the Christmas wishes of each child and distributing gifts which had been donated by local merchants for the event. A total of 22 children including Billy Hooker, who lives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jarvis, 1630 South Barrett, attended the luncheon sponsored by the Jaycee Wives, at Bothwell Hotel. Mrs. John Kehde, left, and Mrs. L. Bock, not shown, were co-chairmen. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

For the Vietnamese

Progress in Vietnam Appears Slight at Best

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Looking at the Vietnam situation before an expected cease-fire, an American might well conclude: in some ways this is just about where the United States came in, where it all began years ago.

As for the South Vietnamese, they face the melancholy possibility that they are in for a replay of some of what happened to them in the early stages of their fratricidal conflict.

The ironies are many and perplexing, seeming to mock the participants after 12 years of war, a casualty list of killed and maimed in the millions, a U.S. investment approaching $200 billion, widespread ruin in Indochina and 4½ frustrating years of Paris talks.

The Map

The Saigon regime today controls most of South Vietnam's population, but in terms of geography there is not too much difference between today's map of who holds what and that of 1954. Much of the territory must be marked as contested, but dug-in Communists control many of the same areas the Vietminh held when the French were being driven out 18 years ago.

When France was being humiliated, a map showed the Vietminh of Communist Ho Chi Minh controlling — apart from practically all Tonkin in the north — most of Annam's rural areas from Quang Tri Province down into the central areas, splotches of territory along the Cambodian border, large areas of Cochin China in the extreme south and much of northern Laos.

Today's map would show North Vietnamese and Viet Cong controlling a big area of Quang Tri, splotches of territory in the center where much real estate remains contested, and areas along the Cambodian border, along with part of Cambodia and much of northern Laos.

In 1954 the Vietminh controlled much of the South outside town and city population centers. What it didn't hold was under the sway of armed religious sects. Today, Communist-held areas are sparsely populated, containing perhaps 10 per cent of the people.

Post-Settlement Prospects

Intelligence sources suggest that the North Vietnamese plan to leave thousands of their troops in the South to merge with the Viet Cong. This recalls a situation that existed in 1954 after the Geneva settlement that divided Vietnam. Hanoi ordered 100,000 Vietminh into the North, but left a tough hard core of 6,000 south of the 17th Parallel to merge with the peasants and bide their time preparing for the next phase of "liberation."

Hanoi then needed time to build a new regime under the Laodong party, to weed out potential enemies. This time Hanoi must recover from losses in 12 years of war against Southern and U.S. forces, from the effects of seven years of bombing and all the rest.

It was January 1961 before the guerrillas mounted their major drive in the South last time. They moved immediately after a Hanoi announcement proclaimed the existence of a "National Liberation Front."

This time, if the front should choose to launch a new campaign of attrition against a Saigon regime, it would have considerable wallop not only because of the well-equipped Northern troops, but from the fact that the front now is a political entity ready to share in South Vietnam's rule.

The Supervision

In 1954 an International Control Commission was set up to supervise the cease-fire. It had Communist, non-Communist and neutral members and a built-in veto. In addition, both sides interfered with its activities.

This time, the supervision machinery would be evenly divided between Communist and non-Communist representatives. The machinery is just as unlikely to be able to enforce cease-fire terms, especially should a situation of guerrilla war and furtive attrition arise again.

South Vietnam's Sovereignty

In the 1950s and 1960s, as the Americans gradually became more deeply involved, Washington's advertised goal was to insure the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of South Vietnam

The United States now apparently agrees to the continued presence in South Vietnam of regular Northern forces — 145,000 by U.S. estimate and 300,000 by Saigon's. Saigon complains that this scarcely squares with notions of sovereignty.

The Peace Talks

The talks started in May 1968 as a two-way U.S.-North Vietnamese affair. They expanded in January 1969 after long, acrimonious wrangling over the shape of the conference table — whether it should have two, three or four sides. The upshot, with an assist from the Russians, was agreement on a round table. This satisfied the American contention that the Viet Cong and its front could not be considered a political entity, and Hanoi's, stand that the Saigon regime was just a puppet. In the settlement, Hanoi now suggests that the Saigon regime is an entity, after all, and the United States concedes that so is the front, round table to the contrary notwithstanding.

When the talks at last became real negotiations, there were in reality only two sides. The Saigon regime and its front rivals, supposedly the main antagonists all along, obviously were just junior partners, obliged in the long run to accept what their patrons had worked out.

The Repair Job

The United States poured wealth and power in incalculable amounts into destruction in Indochina. It is now prepared to regard the area, friend and enemy together, as a whole and pour new wealth into repairing what was destroyed.

Ann Landers

Some Dog Lovers Defend Positions

Dear Ann Landers: I want to respond to that woman who couldn't understand why fifty million Americans were so crazy they'd walk dogs in below-zero weather, spend a fortune on getting them clipped, innoculated, registered, licensed, and trained, buy them special food, beds, collars and coats, and even hire sitters to keep them company when they rebel against kennels at vacation time. The woman signed her letter "The Rugs In My Home Are Beautiful."

My answer is a four letter word. Love. I feel sorry for the lady with the beautiful rugs. She doesn't know what she's missing. — Midland Michigan

---

From Hamilton, Ontario: I'm one of those "crazy nuts" who walked six miles to the veterinarian with a sick puppy when no other transportation was available. (Canadian winters can be brutal.) I also stayed up all night to give my puppy warm milk at frequent intervals. Our canine friends are like members of the family. I can't imagine a life without them.

From Topeka: The rugs in my house aren't beautiful but I wouldn't trade them for the most magnificent rugs in the world if it meant no dogs in my life.

From Memphis: People are becoming more and more suspicious, unpredictable and irresponsible. A dog remains a faithful friend to the end and his gratitude is unfailing. A rug could never do for my morale what my dog does.

From Cleveland: A dog is a bit of mischief wrapped inside a furry coat. If you ever saw the face of a child light up at the sight of a puppy, you'd know what it means to have a dog in the house.

From Big Rapids, Mich.: People have dogs in their lives for the same reason they marry, have children, or nurture friendship. Love and mutual respect are the basis of life's best relationships, whether between people and people or between people and dogs.

My thanks to all who wrote such heartwarming letters in behalf of your pets. We've often heard it said that dog is man's best friend, and my mail attests to the fact that the feeling is mutual.

Dear Ann Landers: That letter from the girl who was raped when she foolishly accepted a ride on the highway with a stranger, made me sit down and write to you even though it's 1:30 a.m.

I am not an old fogy and I'm not a prude. I'm 34 years old, a former model, now the mother of two little girls. When I see what has happened to so-called fashions I am not surprised that rape in the United States is at an all-time high. Anyone who wants to check the figures will see the unmistakable correlation between rape and the advent of miniskirts, the braless craze, the body-stocking look, hot pants, see-through blouses, and necklines slashed to the navel.

Some of the girls dress in such a provocative manner that they look as if they are advertising their bodies for sale — or rent. It's no wonder they are victims of assault. Comment please. — Eye Sore

Dear Eye: It is much too simplistic to infer that rape is the result of scanty or provocative attire. The criminologists do not support that theory. I agree, however, that current modes of dress, both male and female, do reflect the drastic change in society's sexual attitudes. And interestingly enough, the hemlines also reflect the economic trends. When hems go up — so does the stock market!

Medicare-Social Security—IV

Health Help Is Extended To The Disabled

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — For the first time in its short history, the Medicare program designed originally to help pay hospital and related costs for ailing elderly Americans is being broadened to include some people below the age of 65.

Beginning in July, 1973, Medicare coverage will be extended to persons, regardless of their age, who were getting disability payments under Social Security for two years or more by that date.

There is a key reason for this extension. The 1.7 million severely disabled people presently covered by Social Security require seven times as much hospital care and three times as much doctor care as the rest of the U.S. population.

Social Security authorities before too long will provide further direct information for those persons who may qualify under this 1972 change in the law.

Most people affected won't have to take any action right away. But some widows 50 years or older who have been severely disabled for the past two years have not filed disability claims, as they could, under Social Security. Instead they have been drawing survivors' checks as mothers caring for young or disabled children. To become eligible for Medicare, they must see their Social Security office and apply instead for disabled widows' benefits.

Also after July 1, 1973, Medicare will be available to people under 65 who need hemodialysis treatments or kidney transplants for chronic kidney disease. This affects only some 11,000 people a year but the aid will be helpful because dialysis treatments are very costly.

Other changes in Medicare (nearly all effective July 1, 1973):

The new law attempts to clarify "extended care coverage" (post-hospital care in a nursing home), to provide guaranteed coverage for a certain number of days of care, depending on the specific illness. Up to now, considerable confusion has existed about the nature and extent of care under this provision.

Medicare of course has two parts — hospital insurance and so-called medical insurance, covering doctor bills and some other charges. Enrollment for hospital insurance financed under Social Security always has been automatic for qualified persons reaching age 65.

Heretofore, however, those wanting medical insurance had to take positive enrollment steps at specified times. Under new laws, enrollment for this coverage, too, will become automatic in 1973, unless a person chooses not to be so enrolled.

People who "opt out" of medical insurance can change their minds and get into the program. So can persons who have been ineligible because they earlier failed to enroll within prescribed three-year limits (now abolished). But all those not enrolled atuomatically must follow established enrollment procedures. Previously, persons reaching 65 but not qualified under Social Security or Railroad Retirement were ineligible for hospital insurance. Beginning next July 1, they'll be able to enroll for such insurance under the same terms applying to people who enroll for medical insurance. If these people do enroll under this new feature, they must also sign up for medical insurance. They will be asked to pay the full cost of this total protection, and charges will rise as costs for services advance.

A huge array of changes in the law are designed to establish better means for controlling health service costs of all kinds, and for measuring the quality and necessity of services.

VD Testing Given Free

Dear Dr. Lamb — I read your column every night and tonight I saw something that really scared me. Some time ago my uncle raped me and I never told anyone because he is very close to my family. He is an alcoholic and was drunk at the time and I doubt if he even remembers it. But anyway, ever since then I have had a very bad discharge and odor, and your article said that a discharge could be a sign of VD. You said that if anyone thought he had VD he should get medical treatment as soon as possible. Well, if I tell my parents, they will throw me out of the house. My uncle has been with many women who could have VD. I am to be married soon, but I can't get married unless I solve this problem. I need an answer soon.

Dear Reader — Anyone can go to the local health office or county health officer and get an examination for venereal disease. Even minors can do this without having the information transmitted to parents. If venereal disease is present, it can be treated also, in most states, without it being necessary for the information to be given to one's parents. I have no way of knowing whether you really have a venereal disease or not. Many women, particularly young girls, have a fairly normal heavy discharge, but you have quoted me correctly in saying that anyone who has any reason to suspect that he or she has venereal disease should have an examination as soon as possible.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My husband is considering having a vasectomy done, but we have a few questions. Does the man lose his sexual desire or have trouble getting an erection? Does ejaculation still occur? If ejaculation does not occur, does this make him feel less manly? Does he still experience the full feeling of orgasm? We would appreciate any information you can give.

Dear Reader — As common as this operation has become, it is absolutely amazing how much misinformation there is about it. The vasectomy merely interrupts the tiny tube that carries the sperm cells from the testicles. Sperm cells continue to be formed. Their movement up the tube is simply blocked off. The other functions of the testicles, namely the formation of male hormones continues in its normal fashion.

A vesectomy will not improve a man's sex life although a number claim to have increased sexual drive after this procedure has been done. These responses are probably a relief from the anxiety associated with the possibility of a pregnancy. It follows, since the same amounts of male testosterone continues to be formed and the ejaculation process is normal, that the erection and the rest of the sexual function should be entirely normal after a successful vasectomy in a normal male.

Jackson County Trustees Sought

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A search is underway for three trustees who escaped Tuesday from the Jackson County Jail by cutting through bars with a welding torch.

Jail superintendent David Dorsey said the men took the welding torch after "one of the guards apparently got careless and left the prisoners alone" with the equipment.

The missing inmates: Robert E. Pickel, 36, Paul's Valley, Okla., charged with theft; Herman F. Denny, 34, Jackson County, serving a 9-month term for theft, and James M. Chrisman, charged with parole violation.

The men cut openings 8-by-10 inches in each of two gates made of heavy steel bars.

Population Explosion Among Pets Poses Life and Death Problem

By TOM TIEDE

WATERFORD, Va. — (NEA) — The story is discouragingly familiar. A family buys a puppy that nobody really needs and, after a time, when the novelty wears down, the dog becomes a pest. It is no longer cute. It is too big. It smells. So, after some soul searching, the decision is made to take the unwanted animal to a shelter where it is pushed into a cage, often kicking and yowling, while the embarrassed family, relieved of the burden, beats a hasty retreat from the scene.

But the story doesn't end there. And what happens after is a national disgrace.

Assuming the pooch does wind up in a competent pound, no guarantee, and assuming it is not spirited out to the experimental labs, it is still statistically doomed.

It will be kept perhaps for five to ten days, up for sale; but since only a small percentage of the 20 million (annual) pet castaways are ever readopted, it will be destroyed to make way for other throwouts. It will be electrocuted, gassed, chloroformed or, in some cases, placed with other dogs in a tight compression chamber where modern technology will destroy it with high altitude simulation.

Or, if it comes to the National Humane Education Center here in the Virginia suburbs, as 5,000 pets do each year, it will be "euthanized" in a more humane but just as repellent way. The dog will be led to a back room where an attendant will be waiting, armed with a hypodermic needle containing up to 50 cc of deadly sodium phenobarbital. The attendant will caress the pooch, to calm it, while exposing the animal's third and fourth ribs (the heart area). Then, while Fido is standing, and the heart is close to the skin, the attendant will pop the needle quickly. Sometimes the needle will hit a nerve, in which case the animal will cry out. Usually not, though. Usually the dog just slumps, loses consciousness and dies unaware.

The description of one such killing is sobering. The reality of millions of them a year is shocking. Phyllis Wright, director of the Humane Education Center, has destroyed "more than 70,000 dogs and cats in the past few years and says, sadly, with a touch of bitterness, that "the destruction grows and grows every year."

No wonder. According to the Humane Society of the U.S., the nation has a "pet population explosion" that dwarfs all concern over the human variety. Beagles, schnauzers and tabbies are multiplying 20 times the people population. Phyllis Wright says that 10,000 dogs and cats are born in the country every hour, 240,000 a day — and, if all survived, which they do not, they would total 87 million a year.

Without birth control, or human intervention, the situation is intolerabe. Says the Humane Society: "In one year a female dog can give birth to four puppies, two of them female. In the second year the mother and each of her two female offspring can produce 12 puppies. By the third year the three generations of dogs may have produced 36 offspring. Then, year after year, it goes on and on. If the tabulation is carried to the seventh year, the total could be 4,372 dogs — from one mom.

Even more depressing are the mathematics concerning the welfare of the proliferating pets. Authorities believe as many as 15 million dogs and cats are collected by public and private shelters each year. Three-fourths of them are turned in by families (one popular reason: "The damn thing sheds its hair all over my rug"), the other four million found wandering in the streets. Of the shelter animals, only one in four is likely to be reclaimed or readopted; the rest, as many as 11 million a year, are destroyed at an annual cost of more than $60 million.

Something obviously has to be done. And authorities think they know what: legislation, education and sterilization. Some states have already made moves concerning the first; Shreveport, La., for instance, has recently proposed an ordinance which would levy fines on dog owners who allowed their pets to reproduce without check. Some areas have also begun programs to institute the second; most decent animal shelters encourage tours by youngsters, the theory being that if kids acquire a genuine knowledge of pets they will more likely become responsible owners.

The third part of the solution is not so easily enacted. Pet sterilization is an expensive proposition in most areas of the nation. In New York City, dog owners can pay up to $100 for spaying or neutering of their pets. Because of this the Humane Society, and various other animal welfare organizations, have encouraged municipalities to set up reduced-price clinics. Los Angeles is well into a sterilization drive (at costs from $11 to $17) at one public clinic. Other cities are asking advice. "It's the only way," says Miss Wright, "it's the only real way."

But is it? Sterilization, education and legislation are fine in principle, but not so much different from animal population solutions offered over the decades. And since they haven't caught on in the past, except sporadically, there is no real hope that, given all of society's other problems, they will grab hold now.

Thus the pet population explosion will likely continue until more radical measures are taken. Phyllis Wright has one. Sick and tired of killing helpless pets, she says: "After your dog has had 11 puppies, and you bring your problem to me, why not bring your children along. I'll take them into the back room and show them what really happens to the animals who suffer from the stupidity of people."

Department Seeks Qualified Blacks

By JIM MCALL
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — For years police departments have been criticized for allegedly not doing all they could to hire blacks.

However, now law enforcement officials in Arkansas say it is almost impossible to hire qualified blacks.

"We think it would really be an asset to our department to have more black officers," said Texarkana police Chief John Butler. "But we just can't hire them."

Butler said there are 38 commissioned officers on the Texarkana department and only one is black.

Butler agrees with other police administrators that blacks qualified to be a policeman can get higher paying jobs in business and industry.

"We had five blacks take the civil service exam in October and all of them failed," Butler said. He added that 14 whites took the exam and only three passed.

"We're one man short now," Butler said. "If you want to get right down to it, we're having trouble recruiting qualified men—both black and white."

Butler said five years ago there was no black officer on the Texarkana department. He said that an all-out effort had been made in recent years to recruit blacks.

Lt. Jim Beach, public information office for the Arkansas State Police, said that agency also had trouble recruiting blacks.

Out of 396 commissioned officers, only four are black, he said, adding that five years ago none was black.

"I think the answer to our problem is higher salaries," said Deputy Gene Walther, public information officer for the Pulaski County sheriff's department. "I don't see how most police departments keep qualified blacks, whites or anyone else with the salary they pay."

A check of police departments around the state indicated that the starting pay for a patrolman averaged less than $400 per month.

Walther said there were six blacks out of a total of 29 deputies. The number has not changed appreciably in the past five years, he added.

The Little Rock Police Department appears to have one of the best records in the state in its effort to recruit blacks.

Lt. Walter Simpson, the department's public information officer, said the department employed 28 blacks. The department has 290 employes.

Search For Youths

Searching a creek, Franklin County police, volunteers and a boat from the Pacific, Mo., fire department hunted for two brothers, missing near Villa Ridge, Mo., since Monday. The brothers, Jimmy and Kevin Domachowski, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Domachowski, were found in this stream. The searchers combed a wide area near the home and dragged a section of the Bourbeuse River and an adjoining creek near the house. (UPI)

Antitrust Indictments Dealt Out

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — An 18-month investigation into interstate highway construction has led to the indictment by a federal grand jury of nine Illinois construction firms and for of their officers on charges of criminal antitrust violations.

The indictments were returned Tuesday before Judge Henry S. Wise of U.S. District Court who set a hearing for Jan. 22.

The indictment charged the firms and officers with submitting rigged bids to the State of Illinois for construction work on Interstate 74 that cuts across Central Illinois.

The indictment did not give a figure for the amount of money involved in the contracts, but Michael Levinson of the U.S. district attorney's office said they amounted to "multimillions of dollars."

Firms indicted were:

La Neil Construction Co. Inc. and O'Neil Brothers Construction Co., both of Danville; Champaign Asphalt Co. of Champaign; Shoemaker Bridge Co. of Urbana; A.V. Walker Construction Co. of Mattoon; J.L. Simmons and Co. Inc. of Decatur; Culbertson Construction Co. Inc. of Pana; Neil Lentz Construction Inc. of Elwin, and Shappert Engineering Co. of Belvidere.

Individuals named in the indictment were E. J. La Boube of Danville, a partner in O'Neil Brothers and vice president of La Neil; Donald Walker, president of A. J. Walker; Lee H. Sentman Jr., vice president of J.L. Simmons; and Frank M. Shappert, president of Shappert Engineering.

Life Style Transition Hard For Ex-politicians

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some congressional veterans deposed by their constituents in the 1972 elections are finding it difficult to make the transition from public to private life.

The election defeats caught many with their plans down. Some will go back home to practice law or just take it easy. Others will stay around Washington as consultants, lobbyists or perhaps employes of some other branch of government.

That's especially true of those who served several terms and still have considerable influence in Congress and the government in general.

None of the lame duck legislators is likely to go hungry. Some are eligible for the maximum pension of about $34,000 a year, based on length of service including up to five years of military duty.

The oldest of the lame-ducks, both in age and seniority, is Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., who at 84, was defeated in his party primary by 30-year-old Elizabeth Holtzman. He is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and has been in the House 50 years. He plans to open a Washington branch of his New York law firm.

Another old-timer, George P. Miller, D-Calif., isn't certain what he will do when his term ends next month. The 81-year-old veteran of 27 years of service lost his bid for renomination. He is chairman of the House Science and Astronautics Committee.

Miller said he has received several offers to serve as a consultant but hasn't decided whether to accept them because "I'm not a damned bit interested in a 9 to 5 job."

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, is 75 years old and served as a representative and senator for 32 years until her defeat. If she has any plans for the future, she has kept them to herself.

Wayne N. Aspinall, 76-year-old Colorado Democrat defeated in a primary election after 24 years of service, plans to stay around Washington until spring.

He is chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee and may do part-time work as a consultant.

"I am going to get in some fishing and do some of the things I haven't had time to do," he said. "I'm going to build a home on the Colorado River in my home town of Palisade."

Rep. Fred Schwengel, 65, R-Iowa, has past experience in making the transition to another job. He served 10 years in the House before being defeated in 1964. He made a comeback two years later and was defeated again this year. Schwengel, an American history buff, will forego another comeback try to instead become executive head of the U.S. Capitol Historical Society.

HELP FOR POTATO

LONDON (AP) — Breed a potato that can fight back against insects, says a Bristol scientist.

Writing in the magazine "New Scientist," Dr. R. W. Gibson said one could breed a hairy potato which would exude a sticky substance and trap aphids, the potato's main enemy. The hairs would protect the potato.

Danforth Opinion Proves Confusing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Several hundred state employes were in a state of confusion Wednesday as the result of an opinion by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

Danforth held Tuesday that an executive order issued by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes last May putting employes of the Public Service Commission under the merit system was invalid.

Later Hearnes issued additional orders putting employes of the comptroller's office, the administrative services section and the purchasing agent's office under the merit system.

Danforth's order was limited 165 employes of the Public Service Commission, but it left other employes in doubt as to their status also.

The governor was in New Orleans attending a meeting of the Ozarks Regional Commission and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Willard C. Reine, vice chairman of the PSC, was stunned by the news and said he didn't know what would happen next. He said he didn't know Commissioner James F. Mauze, a Republican, had asked for the opinion.

The Personnel Advisory Board which runs the merit system already has started classifying PSC jobs and determining which employes must take merit system examinations. The commission regulates public utilities and many of its staff members hold technical jobs.

Asst. Atty. Gen. John C. Klaffenbach said in the opinion it was clear from debates by the framers of the 1945 Constitution that only the legislature was intended to have authority to extend the merit system to other state Agencies.

He said the executive order does not purport to be a "reorganization plan" which is required to be submitted to legislative approval.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The proportion of American adults with at least a high school diploma went from 43 per cent in 1970 to 60 per cent in 1971, The World Almanac notes. Among persons 20 to 29, who would have completed high school more recently, the proportion with a high school education increased from 65 per cent to 82 per cent for whites, and from 40 per cent to 62 per cent for Negroes.

Carl Rowan

Brazil's GNP up, but civil liberties are down

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — President Kennedy's most eloquent justification for the Alliance for Progress was his assertion that, if the ruling elite would not promote and accept a peaceful revolution, they would have to face violent revolt.

Rowan

The assumption in those days, when America's cares encompassed the globe, was that Latin America was in a race between democratic social change and a Communist takeover.

What few people quite accepted was that the real race was against right-wing military coups.

The much-ballyhooed Alliance was for the most part a failure, even when Uncle Sam backed rhetoric with money. A quarter-billion dollars of U.S. aid was pumped into the miserable, poverty-wracked northeast area of this country. Yet, U.S. diplomats here now agree with Archbishop Helder Camara that the money went into capital-intensive projects which made the rich richer but produced precious few jobs for the poor residents of that long-neglected area of parched scrublands.

In 1963 with Brazil's last democratically-elected government in power, this vast country's industrial growth rate was an appalling minus 5.3 per cent, and inflation roared on at a stunning rate of 82.1 per cent.

It was not the Communists who exploited this malaise, but Brazil's generals, who seized power in 1964 and have ruled with utter ruthlessness ever since.

What has happened in this lovely country since that coup adds up to an "endorsement" of dictatorship and to a gloomy outlook for real democracy in a country where so many people yearn for the development and national prestige that are becoming realities in Brazil.

For the ruling generals here, nothing has seemed to matter more than "development." They stripped civilian politicians of the right to hold office and ran some out of the country. They muzzled the press, canceled elections and even held a special presidential "election" in 1969 in which only generals could vote. Professors were fired on political grounds without any semblance of legal process. Priests, students, others were harassed or jailed because their criticism made them suspected "enemies of the state."

This provoked a wave of terrorism in urban areas, marked by fire-bombings and spectacular kidnappings of diplomats, including the U.S. ambassador. The government moved ruthlessly to combat the terrorists, even permitting secret police "death squads" to execute without charge or trial some presumed "subversives" and "criminals."

While protests arose around the world, the generals and their hand-picked civilian elite were borrowing money at a record pace. They succeeded in making Brazil the economic envy of Latin America and much of the rest of the world. Industrial growth has averaged about 11 per cent in recent years, with inflation reduced to just over 19 per cent.

There's still an awfully lot of coffee in Brazil, but this nation of 100 million people now boasts that it will soon be selling industrial computers to Japan, with which Brazil's trade is rising at the rate of 30 per cent a year (as compared with 6 per cent for the U.S.). Ford will set up an automobile engine plant here, and operations have already begun in ship building, petrochemicals, telecommunications equipment and other high-technology items.

Brazilians think they have risen above that age-old insult that "Brazil is the land of the future — and always will be."

Is this remarkable development worth the price in loss of liberty and the trampling of democratic and human values? Most Brazilians seem to think like Father Viveiros de Castro, until recently the rector of Catholic University here, who said to me: "It is difficult to know how to feel. I often think about not being able to go into the streets to protest, or give a fiery speech criticizing the government. But then I say, well, protesting and giving speeches isn't all that important in my life."

Still, there obviously are many thousands of students, clergy, journalists, professors who do not think anything has happened that justifies the oppressions of the last eight years.

For all her new economic glories, they say, Brazil still has the worst distribution of income of all Latin American countries, with half of Brazil's people so poor they are not really in the money economy. The critics complain that half the people still cannot read and write. They note that northeast Brazil is still a wasteland of degradation, with half the job force in Recife either unemployed or underemployed.

But the government insists that the economic boom will soon bear dramatic fruit for the masses. Minister of Planning Joao Paulo de Reis Veloso cited a 142 per cent increase in federal expenditures for education from 1963 to 1971, with school enrollments rising as follows: primary, up from 9,300,000 to 13,325,000; secondary, up from 1,710,000 to 4,725,000; college and university, up from 124,000 to 543,000.

Veloso says housing units built rose from a 1937-1963 average of 4,600 a year to 114,000 units in 1971, with 238,000 units targeted for 1974.

This is the Brazilian record that led President Nixon to say: "As Brazil goes, so goes the rest of the Latin American continent."

This galls leaders of other Latin countries, yet it is clear that many have mimicked Brazil's imposition of military dictatorship. What they have not yet emulated is Brazil's climb away from economic stagnation.

Taking a new look at cost of living

Although it has been kept down to about 3 per cent over the past 12 months, the dismal fact remains that the cost of living index (CPI) has soared by 26 per cent since 1967, and only the most unregenerate optimist expects anything but continued inflation.

The situation, fortunately, is not necessarily as dismal as the figures. The reason, points out F. Lee Moore Jr. in Money magazine, is that the CPI, the government's basic "market basket" of certain goods and services, measures changes in prices but seldom takes into account changes in the quality of the goods and services it keeps track of.

Consider one simple example, he says. Motor oil is up 70 per cent on the CPI since 1956. But because of technological advances in both oil and automobile engines, one quart of oil now goes up to three times as far as it did in the mid-1950s.

Most of today's cars require oil changes only every 4,000 to 6,000 miles, compared with the 1,000- to 2,000-mile intervals recommended 15 years ago. Thus the per-mile cost of oil is actually down by more than 40 per cent.

House paint prices, for another example, are 24 per cent higher than they were in 1964. But the usual purchase today is an acrylic water-base paint that lasts 25 to 40 per cent longer than the typical oil-base paint of the early 1960s. It also covers better and is more convenient to use, since brushes or rollers can now be washed in water.

According to the CPI, sheets have gone up by 20 per cent since 1964. In fact, most buyers have switched to polyester-cotton combinations that cost about 50 per cent more than all-cotton sheets but last at least twice as long and require no ironing.

The moral, says Moore, is that consumers should avoid the easy but mistaken assumption that price rises always threaten living standards. They should take headlines about the rising consumer price index with a grain of salt — a commodity, incidentally, that still costs just about what it did in 1960. (NEA)

Merry-go-round

Federal flood czar is big on publicity

By JACK ANDERSON

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Six months after Hurricane Agnes ripped through Wyoming Valley, her wake is still littered with broken buildings. Less obvious is the bureaucratic havoc wrought by Frank Carlucci, a human windstorm out of Washington.

I was taken recently on a quick tour of the devastated area. Trailing my car, I later learned, were two of Carlucci's agents. They were Michael Guzzi and Larry Marion who had been assigned to find out where I went, what I said and whether I left any reporters behind. They stuck on my tail all the way to the airport to make sure I was safely out of town.

Their concern about my visit made me curious what Carlucci didn't want me to discover. As President Nixon's personal representative, he directed the federal flood relief operation.

So I disptached three reporters — Ken Fisher, Jim Dawson and Jack Cloherty — to Wilkes-Barre to investigate flood relief. They brought back evidence of mismanagement, miscalculations and possible malfeasance. The FBI, which also got wind that something was wrong, has been investigating, too.

Hurricane Agnes, which battered Wyoming Valley last June 23, has now gone down as the greatest natural disaster in U.S. history. The damage is estimated at $4 billion.

Federal disaster teams rushed in swiftly to aid the flood victims. In the first few hectic weeks, thousands of bureaucrats and private citizens did heroic service.

Then Carlucci blew in from Washington and quickly rounded up 10 government press agents. He directed a high-powered public relations operation which portrayed him as a modern-day Moses who had come to part the red tape.

He had carte blanche authority to resolve all problems, whether it be the amount the government would loan to flood-ravaged business firms or plumbing repairs on an individual trailer. One minute, Carlucci would be dictating policy to high-ranking government officials. The next, he would meet with flood victims to dispense favors like a feudal lord.

For months, Carlucci would spend a few hours each day in the government's model mobile home in Scanlon Field, listening to citizen complaints. The cases he heard became known thereafter as "Carlucci Specials" and were handled by special assistants with authority over all government departments.

For those fortunate enough to gain an audience with him, Carlucci issued dramatic orders that often produced more waste than results. He arranged for a crane, for example, to lift a supplicant's mobile home into a back yard. He also kept a crack team of maintenance men ready to be dispatched instantly to take care of individual complaints. Often, the maintenance men waited around for hours for an assignment, while unfavored trailers went without heat or plumbing because no workmen were available.

Those who got in to see Carlucci weren't always the most worthy but the most impatient, who wouldn't wait their turn but sought special treatment. Thanks to Carlucci, they sometimes got relief that had been intended for the elderly or invalid who should have received first priority.

Those who dispensed these royal favors for Carlucci told us his main objective was to get a good press. For awhile, his press agents were "banging out about 10 or 12 press releases a day," acknowledged one staff member.

Newspapers and radio-TV stations were bombarded with press notices, carefully prepared to cover up mistakes and minimize problems. "Mobile homes are not any more susceptible for fire than ordinary houses," assured a typical press release. But the truth was contained in an internal memo, which called for fire extinguishers in each mobile home "because of the danger involved should a fire break out..." The Wilkes-Barre fire chief told us the trailer homes were "hazardous" and the area was "very fortunate" not to have had any fire fatalities.

Carlucci's administration of the flood relief program, meanwhile, was often hectic. Many residents complained about abrupt changes in government policy, arbitrary deadlines for flood relief applications and monumental mismanagement.

For example, Carlucci opposed urban renewal funds for the non-urban communities across the river from Wilkes-Barre until most of the home owners, believing there were no emergency federal funds available to them, arranged their own loans to rehabilitate their homes. Then he did an about-face.

Carlucci's interest in the area suddenly declined after the election. His executive assistant now handles most of the work. Carlucci helicopters in now and then to read an occasional press release.

From the time he arrived, Frank Carlucci ran the flood recovery operation with an eye more on publicity than substance. We'll have a report on even more serious irregularities in a future column.

FOOTNOTE: Carlucci assured us he made his decisions about the "specials" purely on merit. "I said 'No' a number of times," he insisted. He denied the crane incident, and said he blocked assistance for non-urban areas for a time because he was not sure "whether or not it was the most effective use of the money." He handled the flood recovery program, he said, at the same time that he was working in the White House on the budget. He contended he did the best he could under the circumstances.

Affluence brings no solutions

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It is not to diminish the problems of the still disadvantaged to contend, as some astute young men in this town are doing, that the deeper problems of this and perhaps all western society are the dilemmas which come with affluence.

Biossat

For a long, long time, we in this country especially, assumed that the development of our obvious natural riches and the spreading of this wealth over more and more people would bring us into some sort of trouble-free zone of living.

The brutally painful lesson of this age is that it has not worked out this way at all. We have gained affluence as has no other society, only to learn that it offers its own grave problems and we don't have any very good solutions for them so far.

One of my bright young friends is, it seems to me, right on the track when he says no politician or other public figure in this nation is really addressing himself to this great puzzle.

Too many such figures are still telling us that the big thing to do is feel guilty about the lingering problems of the poor. Again, to say that they are wrong is not to demean the difficulties of the poor nor to suggest their "benign neglect." It is simply to argue that we need to come awake to the more profound things troubling this society.

The plainest truth is that we don't know what to do with affluence. At least in American society we have discovered that it produces an incredible sense of emptiness and boredom. It robs us of challenge, and we are finding that continuing challenge is essential to vibrant life.

These are not new themes. They have been expressed before. But it is entirely true that our public figures don't know how to approach them. If they speak of challenge, they talk of finding it in older problems of lesser force.

The boredom and emptiness show themselves, of course, in endless ways. They are visible on the surface, in meaningless motion for motion's sake (youngsters driving about with nowhere to go), with "we will enjoy" vacationers busy not enjoying themselves, with countless folk merely lounging about as if the object of living were just to get through the day.

The young loungers are a sad sight. They may not think so. As they drape themselves in postures of languor in public places, they may tell you soberly they are "turned off and tuned out."

At root, that is a confession of emptiness. Think what their days must be like, how bare must be their store of memories. "Let's see, what did we do Wednesday? Oh, yes, that was the afternoon we sat on the steps of the bank."

Those who don't lounge but do in fact work may tell you their lives are boring, whether they sit at desks or labor on factory lines. Who can doubt it? Work in this society, from the assembly line to the professor's narrow-gauge study, is overspecialized.

What we need is a fuller, richer view and a broader quest in living. We have indeed made the seeking of material things our goal. When the search succeeds, as it has for many millions, what follows then?

As in the necessary routine of simply existing, so with some tasks in an industrial society: They are inherently repetitive and boring. Great challenges submerge them. But these are vanishing with affluence.

Other wide receivers chosen were Otis Taylor of Kansas City and Gary Garrison of San Diego. The other tight end was Rich Caster of the New York Jets.

Winston Hill of the Jets was selected at offensive tackle and San Diego's Walt Sweeney won nomination at a guard spot. Baltimore's Bill Curry joins Otto at center.

Joe Namath of the Jets was named by the AFC head coaches to share quarterback duties with Lamonica while Earl Morrall, leader of unbeaten Miami, was overlooked.

The coaches picked the four 1,000-yard ground gainers, tabbing Buffalo rushing king O.J. Simpson along with Csonka, Hubbard and Harris.

Other defensive ends were Elvin Bethea of Houston and Deacon Jones of San Diego. Cincinnati's Mike Reid was named as a defensive tackle along with Paul Smith of the Denver Broncos.

The linebacking corps for the AFC Pro Bowlers will include Willie Lanier and Bobby Bell of Kansas City and Ted Hendricks of Baltimore.

Vikings Whip Warsaw, 72-63

LaMonte moved to within a half-game of Sedalia Sacred Heart Tuesday night in the Kaysinger Conference basketball standings with a 72-63 win over Warsaw on the latter's home court.

LaMonte, who got most of its scoring for the back court duo of Glyndon "Buggar" Bennett and Darrell Oswald, moved to 2-0 in league play. Sacred Heart, who lost a 70-53 non-league contest to Pilot Grove, leads the league with a 3-0 record.

In other Tuesday night action featuring Kaysinger teams, Cole Camp downed Windsor, 72-47, and Green Ridge whipped Chilhowee, 78-40; both were non-league tilts.

Stover was scheduled to host Lincoln, but the game was postponed.

Bennett ripped the Warsaw nets for 29 points, while Oswald added 23, to account for the bulk of the Vikings' total output. Donnie Hitaffer also reached double figures with an additional 16 for the Vikes' ninth win in 11 outings this season.

Warsaw, who now stands at 2-2 in league play, jumped to a quick 20-12 lead as the second quarter opened, but couldn't hold on to it as the Vikings managed to tie it at 36-all by the half. LaMonte outscored Warsaw in both the final two stanzas, 16-12 and 20-15.

Six-foot, seven-inch Warsaw center Doug Stevens led the Wildcats with 17.

LaMonte also captured the volleyball game, 29-18; Warsaw salvaged the junior varsity basketball contest, 46-33.

Cole Camp got off to a slow start against Windsor, holding only a 11-10 lead as the second period opened. But the Blue Birds fired in 22 points in the second quarter, added 17 in the third and outscored the Greyhounds, 22-9 in the final stanza, to chalk up their third win in 10 starts.

Warren Harms led the Cole Camp scoring attack with 22.

Five Green Ridge players reached double figures as the Tigers shelled Chilhowee, 78-40. Mike Profitt and Kent Scotten topped all scores with 16 each for the winning Bengals. Edward Myears added 14, Joe Purchase tossed in 12, while John Dove netted 11.

It was only the second win of the season for Green Ridge, who now stands at 2-7 overall.

SFCC Romps, 76-54

Easley, Webb Come Off Bench to Spark SFCC

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

A couple of regulars didn't start Tuesday night for the State Fair Community College Roadrunners, but if their performances coming off the bench continue, they may get their jobs back.

Colles Webb, a 6-3 forward from Memphis, Tenn., and 6-1 Kansas City East product Jack Easley, a guard, came off the bench to spark State Fair to a rousing 76-54 win over Allen County Community Junior College of Iola, Kan.

Easley led the Roadrunners in scoring with 16 points after relinquishing his starting back court role to Walt Gregory. Webb followed with 14 points, all of which came in the second half. In addition, Webb topped all rebounders with 17; 11 of those came in the second half.

State Fair Coach Bill Barton said after Saturday night's loss to Kansas City, Kan., Junior College that there would be some changes made in the starting lineup — there were — but Barton may be forced to put Webb and Easley back in their starting roles.

Although the outcome was a 22-point margin for the Roadrunners, it wasn't a picture book performance. SFCC was charged with 30 turnovers, 15 in each half. But in the rebounding statistics, State Fair held a very commanding 73-33 edge.

From the field, SFCC hit on 34 of 92 shots for a cool 37 per cent. The Red Devils weren't any better as they connected for only 31 per cent, hitting on 20 of 66. Barton probably wasn't too happy about the free throw shooting either as his cagers hit on but eight of 20 attempts for 40 per cent. But it was a win and as the State Fair mentor said after the game, "... it feels good to get back on the winning track."

State Fair had lost its last three straight. The win pushed them to 5-8; Allen County dropped to 4-6.

The Roadrunners' offense against Allen County's 2-1-2 zone in the early going was spotty at best, as they fell behind 6-2 early.

Charles Shell, who has been State Fair's most consistent player this season, gave SFCC its first lead in the game at 8-6 on an eight-footer with 16:07 to go in the first half. After that, Allen County never could regain the advantage.

Webb and Easley made their first appearances in the game with 7:30 to go in the period, when the Roadrunners were clinging to a 21-19 lead. Easley rang the bell for the first time with 6:53 showing on a 20-footer that pushed the count to 23-19. Less than a minute later, he connected on a three-point play that gave SFCC a 28-19 advantage. He scored again with 3:28; that pushed the State Fair margin back to nine, 30-21.

But the Roadrunners turned cold and accounted for only two more points in the half. Again it was Easley, who scored. Those points broke a three minute, 17 second dry spell. He pumped one in with :11 to go in the half, giving SFCC its biggest lead of the first period, 34-24. The Red Devils had enough time to cut two points off the advantage before the buzzer sounded for the break.

Although Easley and Webb had played well off the bench in the first half, Barton went with his starting lineup, which saw both watching the early second-half action from the bench.

But it wasn't long before they got back in. Webb came in for Gregory with 16:20 to go, giving the Roadrunners four forwards and one guard against the Allen County zone. It wasn't long after that that Easley came in for forward Joe Hailey.

In the meantime, the Red Devils had switched to man-to-man coverage. At the other end of the court, Barton had gone to a zone for the first time in the contest. Both moves proved beneficial for State Fair.

A quick, six-point scoring blitz by SFCC between 12:02 and 11:32 gave the Roadrunners a 50-32 margin. Allen County never threatened after that, as Barton cleared the bench in the late minutes to give all his team a chance to relish the win.

But the Roadrunners will have little time to savor it, as they host Crowder College, Thursday night. The Roughriders handed State Fair its worst defeat of the season, 72-52, early in the season.

Scoring

State Fair (76) — Lewis Busch 5-2-4, Paul Day 0-0-0, Roger Donnell 1-0-1, Jack Easley 6-4-1, Steve Flippin 0-0-0, Jeff Gilmore 0-1-0, Walt Gregory 1-0-2, Joe Hailey 2-1-4, Mark Jones 2-0-2, Larry Kreoger 0-0-0, Charles Shell 7-0-2, Colles Webb 7-0-2, Brent Yates 3-0-3. Totals — 34-8-21.

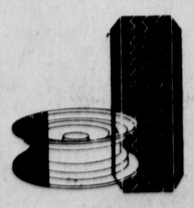

Allen County (54) — Dan Bolen 2-2-5, David Regehr 4-0-1, Matt Mavec 5-3-1, Ken Dreier 0-0-1, John Olson 2-1-2, Joe Johnson 4-5-3, Rick Bloomquist 1-0-2, Chris Naylor 0-0-2, Bruce Walquist 2-1-2, Mike Miller 0-2-0, Mike Spillman 0-0-1. Totals — 20-14-20.

Schlotzhauer Heats Up for 36 To Sink Sacred Heart, 70-53

By WARREN RIPLEY
Staff Sportswriter

PILOT GROVE — For the second year in a row, the Sacred Heart Gremlins traveled into Pilot Grove with a beefy record only to return home with a defeat.

Randy Schlotzhauer, a 6-3 forward, was a one-man wrecking crew for the Tigers pouring in a total of 36 points. At the defensive end of the court, the Bengal's 6-5 pivotman Melvin Lang pulled down 17 rebounds to disallow the Grems any second shots and lead the home five to a convincing 70-53 win.

Schlotzhauer drove through the Sacred Heart defense several times, hit on short jumpers and scored on many fast break layups. For the Gremlins, only guard Dan Borchers could find the range consistently as he totaled 15, high for the Gremlins.

Both teams started out in a man-to-man defense with Sacred Heart adding their usual 2-2-1 zone press. The Tigers jumped out to a 4-0 lead on two drives by Schlotzhauer. Sacred Heart fought back inch by inch until with 3:49 left in the initial period Jeff Karigan picked off an errant Tiger pass and hit Bill Freund, who layed it in to knot the score at eight apiece. Freund was fouled on the shot but missed the charity toss.

Pilot Grove then scored two buckets and one free throw to take a 13-8 advantage into the second stanza. Certain patterns were established in the first quarter. The Tigers tenacious defense forced the Grems to shoot from outside where they were cold and Schlotzhauer was scoring almost at will.

Schlotzhauer really broke loose in the second period. Between 6:39 and 3:52 he hit five buckets in a row to personally outscore the Sedalians 10-2 and led the Tigers to their biggest lead in the first half, 27-12. But the Gremlins rallied behind the shooting of Borchers and held the host squad to one point for the remaining of the half to edge closer by the intermission, 28-21.

The third period saw the Gremlins continue to rally. This time the rally caught fire, mainly due to the press. After having little luck in forcing mistakes in the first half, the Gremlin's pressure finally paid off big. The Tigers were momentarily rattled into one error after another until with 4:50 remaining, Sacred Heart had pulled to within one point, 31-30. But two jumpers by Joe Rapp and a free throw gave the Bengals a 35-30 lead.

Once again the Gremlins brought the game within one point, 35-34. But this was as close as the Gremlins could get any more. Pilot Grove once more threatened to break the game open but couldn't hit anything from the charity stripe which gave the Gremlins hope, but even that was soon taken away. With six seconds remaining, all-district forward Bill Freund picked up his fifth personal foul. Pilot Grove hit both free throws to give them a 44-38 buffer going into the finale.

The first three minutes of the last quarter was the crusher for the Grems. The Tigers burst to a 55-40 lead. This did the Gremlins in for the night as the Tigers were in command the rest of the way.

The Gremlins hit poorly from the field, managing only 19 field goals on 83 attempts for a meager 23 per cent. Pilot Grove on the other hand hit 47 per cent from the field but when unguarded at the free throw line the Tigers could only hit 12 of 34 attempts for a poor 37 per cent.

"We're lucky to have kept the game that close," said head coach Tom Beer of the Gremlins, matter-of-factly. "Those kids from Pilot Grove grew up over the summer. Schlotzhauer beat us inside and Lang (Melvin) beat us on the boards. He (Lang) had 17 out of their total of thirty rebounds, which didn't leave much for the rest of them. We didn't look good. We had the shots we wanted but couldn't hit them. We'll see what we can do at our place when Pilot Grove plays us again."

The Gremlin's record dropped to 11-3 overall. Pilot Grove, who has lost only to Smithton and Fayette, is now 9-2.

The Gremlins took the junior varsity tilt 43-27.

Scoring

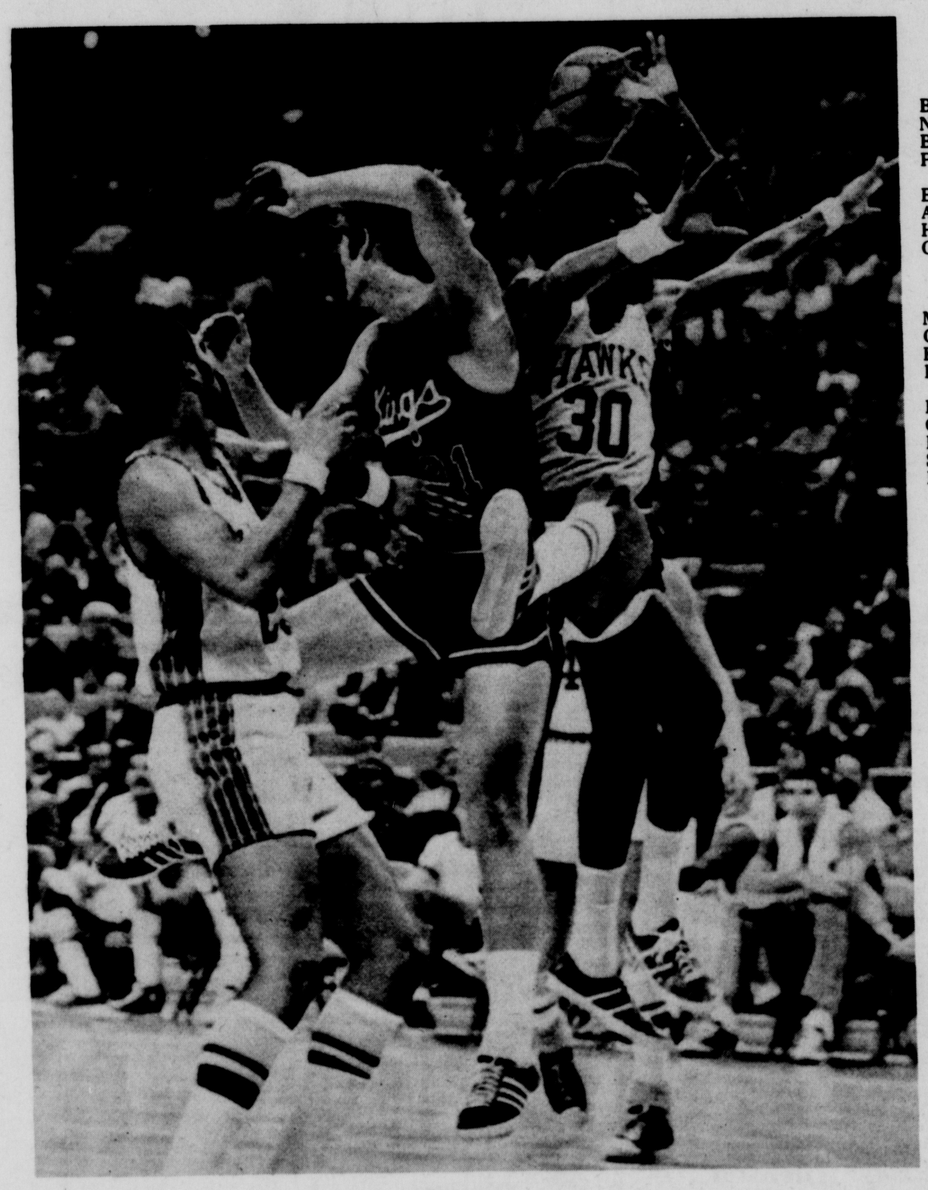

Pilot Grove (70) — Schlotzhauer 36, Ellebrandt 14, M. Lang 7, Rapp 7, D. Lang 4, Marvin Twenter 2.

Sacred Heart (53) — Borchers 15, Karigan 10, Freund 8, Dunham 6, Fischer 7, Simon 2, Twenter 2, Lick 2, McMullin 1.

'Gabby' Hartnett Dies Early Wednesday

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles "Gabby" Hartnett, one of the all-time heroes of the Chicago Cubs and a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, died early today.

Hartnett, who was 72 today, entered Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge Dec. 7 suffering from cirrhosis of the liver.

It Went That-a-way

Atlanta forward George Trapp (30) and teammate Lou Hudson (23) teamed up to block a shot by Kansas City's Dick Gibbs (31), but ended up in a tangle of arms and legs when Gibbs wisely passed to Nate Archibald (30). Archibald, the NBA's leading scorer, went up for an easy two points. The Kings lost the contest, 119-102.

Rozelle Truns Down President's Request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle today refused a request by President Nixon to televise locally all playoff games that were sold out 48 hours in advance of kickoff, Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst announced.

In a statement released by the Justice Department, Kleindienst said the Nixon administration would strongly urge the new Congress to reexamine the pro football's antitrust exemption and would seek legislation which he said "is more in keeping with the public interest."

Railroad Will Correct Problem

Chemicals Threaten Bennett Spring

(Democrat-Capital Service)

LEBANON — The Frisco Railroad has agreed to move 600 tons of soda ash and two buried tank cars containing phosphorus which threaten the Bennett Spring State Park watershed.

The loose soda ash and the leaking tank cars were left after an Aug. 13 derailment of 30 cars near Phillipsburg, some nine miles south of Bennett Spring. At the time, the material left by the railroad burned for three weeks.

The Frisco has begun digging the material, which will be trucked to an abandoned clay pit near Rolla. The pit has been approved both by the Clean Water Commission and the Missouri Geological Survey as a safe place to deposit the chemicals.

What can't be prevented except by moving the material is seepage into the area's underground water system. The area above Bennett Spring is quite porous and officials at the Missouri Geological Survey are convinced that, if left, the phosphorus and soda ash would percolate into the underground system which feeds Bennett Spring.

That the chemicals are lethal to fish already has been proven — all fish in two lakes belonging to area landowner Roy Jacobs were killed in mid-November when rains became heavy enough to cause runoff.

"This material is toxic — perhaps not as much as a pesticide," says Dr. James Whitley, chief of water quality investigation for the Department of Conservation. "But runoff from the area killed trout in a test in just a few minutes."

What is not known is how long it would take contaminated water percolating through the underground water system of the area to reach Bennett Spring and whether it would have been sufficiently diluted to render it harmless.

Missouri Geological Survey tests made at Lebanon, which is about 13 miles from Bennett Spring, show it takes water about a month to travel that distance. It would be a definite gamble to leave the material where it is.

The three choices discussed at a meeting on Dec. 4 of concerned state agencies and the Frisco were 1) to do nothing; 2) to try to seal off the area and 3) to move the materials.

All agreed that the only logical choice was to move the material, especially after a demonstration with a back hoe showed that the red clay subsurface begins about four feet down. Red clay will not hold water and the two ammonia tank cars were buried at least 20 feet deep — meaning any leakage would drain into the subsurface water system.

A specific conductance meter is monitoring water at Bennett Spring. It shows changes in electrical conductivity of the water and would reveal the presence of the type of dissolved salts seeping from the train wreck.

After the train wreck, the Frisco Railroad bought 3½ acres of land from Leslie Mulligan, buried the two badly damaged tank cars containing phosphorus which was being sent to a munitions manufacturer and spread the 600 tons of soda ash on the ground.

Should the Bennett Spring water become toxic, the Department of Conservation would be faced with an unprecedented problem — moving many trout to another hatchery.

"It would be a tremendous job," says Charles Purkett, chief of Fisheries for the Department. "I'm not sure how practical it would be. It's not the kind of situation which would make a hatchery manager optimistic and we hope we don't have to try it."

One thing all bridge players should learn is not to show any signs of worry or pique when dummy hits the table.

Goodness knows that expert South wasn't at all happy with the dummy. He was playing three no-trump doubled and vulnerable and the opponents held ace-king, ace-king, ace against him.

He didn't expect to make his contract, but no one could tell from his expression that he had any worries at all. He planned his campaign while East was busy thinking about his play to the first trick.

Eventually East produced the six of spades and South promptly won with his king. Then he slapped down the queen of clubs and it was West's turn to have a problem.

West was a pretty good player and eventually West decided that South did not have a second spade stopper, but did hold both red aces and the king-queen of clubs and was trying to steal a club trick before running off seven tricks in the red suits.

West hopped up with his ace and down crashed East's king. All of a sudden South not only was going to make his contract but he actually came up with two overtricks.

West led the nine of spades and East ducked again. South took his queen; led the seven of clubs and let it ride after West played low.

After this he wound up with six diamonds, three clubs and two spades for one of the best results of 1972.

POW Issue Key to Peace a Second Time

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only once before in the history of American warfare has a formal prisoner exchange at war's end been a key to the negotiated settlement.

That was in 1953 when the allied and communist sides repatriated thousands of soldiers and airmen captured during three years of bitter fighting in Korea.

In previous wars the United States liberated the prison camps of its defeated enemies. In some cases exchanges of sick and wounded prisoners took place even before a cessation of hostilities. But in Korea and now Vietnam where there is no decisive victor, the POW release has become a part of the negotiated settlement.

Although the finishing touches remain for the Vietnam cease-fire agreement, the arrangement for the prisoner release is likely to resemble that of the Korean experience.

A total of 4,428 American fighting men were recovered from enemy prison camps in Korea in exchange for 74,000 North Korean and Chinese prisoners.

The initial exchange, Operation Little Switch, began in April 1953, three months before the cease-fire, and involved only a small group of sick and wounded men—about 680 allied prisoners including 149 Americans for some 6,670 Communists.

But it wasn't until Operation Big Switch at Panmunjom in August of that year that the trade took place.

The armistice agreement called for the prisoners to be repatriated within 60 days but it took only 33. A similar 60-day timetable is part of the draft agreement for ending the Vietnam war, but Pentagon officials predict the exchange will be speeded up once it gets under way, probably in Vientiane, Laos.

As of Dec. 2, the Pentagon listed 552 U.S. captives in Indochina.

In Korea, the allied prisoners were loaded aboard trains at the prison camps in the North and brought south to Panmunjom. Communists held in the South were trucked north for the trade that began Aug. 5, 1953, with the release of 70 happy, shouting American GIs who marched across Freedom Bridge under the protective eyes of the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission.

Once in American hands, the GIs were trucked to nearby Freedom Village for quick medical checks and debriefings by intelligence officers searching for clues to the whereabouts of the missing. Within a few days they were loaded aboard troop ships for the long journey home.

More than 2,700 of the 7,200 captured Americans died in the Korean prison camps. The toll—38 per cent of the total captured—was the worst since the American Revolution.

Twenty-one other American POWs voluntarily stayed behind, but most eventually came home.

In World War II, nearly 11 per cent or 14,090 of the 129,701 Americans captured died in enemy prison camps.

Allied forces liberated the camps as they overran the German lines, freeing the POWs as they went. In the Pacific, the surrendering Japanese located scores of camps for the occupation forces which went in an brought the POWs out.

A major problem facing the United States at the end of the Vietnam war will be the fate of 1,266 Americans listed as missing in action.

The Pentagon hopes that the International Red Cross will be permitted to inspect the communist prison camps. But it is expected that after all the evidence is examined a presumptive finding of death will be issued in many cases.

Such was the problem in the Korean war which leaves 389 Americans unaccounted for even now.

Under terms of the Korean armistice agreement, each side agreed to repatriate or otherwise account for all POWs and deceased combatants of the other side if it knew their fate.

After completing the prisoner exchange in September, 1953 the United Nations Command handed the Communists a list of 944 American servicemen and 2,460 other allied personnel believed to have been in communist hands during the war.

After efforts by Army Graves Registration Units plus the sifting of thousands of reports from prisoners who were repatriated, the number of unaccounted-for Americans was reduced to 389.

To this day, when asked about the missing 389, the U.S. government's response is:

"The Departments of Defense and State have endeavored to obtain a satisfactory accounting from the Communists....

"The Communists, however, consistently ignore or reject the demands and maintain they have no further information.

"Countless investigations of tips, leads and rumors relating to the servicemen have been made by government intelligence agencies without developing any significant evidence to indicate that they survived the period of hostilities."

Airport Noise Driving New York Residents Batty

By TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Early evening is a hell of a time around the Tom Hickey home. He lives next to a railroad track, adjacent to a firehouse, and across from John F. Kennedy airport. The commuter traffic roars by on the rails, usually the firetruck bellows out to answer a call — and just when the windows are rattling good, a 747 jet plane thunders from the sky, "so close I swear they skid on the roof," and screeches to cacophonous touchdown on the neighborhood runway.

"My God," says Hickey. "Like I almost go out of my mind."

So do thousands of other homeowners and apartment dwellers in the vicinity of New York's and other metropolitan airports. Never mind the trains and firetrucks, the jet noise alone is enough to send a citizen under his bed covers for security.

Few authorities, much less residents, have measured the exact racket levels on the edge of America's big ports. But noise experts agree they are appalling, and possibly damaging. New York City's noise pollution agency says the government allows a maximum of 180 decibels of noise 3.5 miles from touchdown, which puts folks like Tom Hickey, a quarter mile from the runway, under hazardous conditions at best.

Indeed, Hickey may well be going batty and not know it. Bob Bennin, New York's noise abatement specialist, says that he is not so much concerned with the citizen's ears as he is with their minds. "I wonder about the psychological effects of jet port traffic. Imagine one of those big things swooping over your house every few minutes. You couldn't help but worry about it crashing. You couldn't help becoming unnerved time and again about the disruption of your life. I think a deep study of the residents around JFK could turn up some very interesting conclusions."

No doubt a deep study would. But forget it. Anyone requiring information about life on the fringe of JFK need only ask Tom Hickey. His modest $10,000 house is situated "two stone throws" away from one of the Kennedy's four runways, the longest one (14,572 feet). Thus, say on a Friday evening, when the wind is blowing wrong, he may be visited by as many as 20 or 30 takeoffs and landings. "If I look up I can see if their tires need changing. They aren't 300-400 feet from my chimney."

The noise, says Hickey, beggars belief. "Sometimes I wake up at night, drowsy, and get scared as hell before I realize what it is." And the side effects are just as bad: The plaster cracks, the curtains wiggle and the TV set goes blahooey. "I got a brother who lives on the other end of the runway. If I'm talking to him on the phone, and a plane comes in, it's ridiculous. First I gotta say: 'Wait a minute, a plane's landing.' Then just about the time the noise is okay on my end my brother says: 'Wait a minute, now it's over here.' I mean it's crazy. A damn two-minute phone call sometimes stretches into a 10-minute silent extravaganza."

The rest of Hickey's neighborhood, a suburban enclave known as Howard Beach, gets it equally bad. A nun at the nearby parochial school says: "In the summer, when the windows are open, it's impossible to get the students to concentrate." A lady in the neighborhood Rexall drug store says she thinks the worst part is at night because "I swear, it's made my husband impotent." And Ed Fennell, a commuting executive, claims the noise is not all of the fallout: "Take a look at my house. I wash it down every six weeks and it's still filthy. These planes pollute everything."

Fennell, for one, has become so "thoroughly disgusted" with the situation that he has organized civic indignation to fight for improvements. His group, the Howard Beach Civic Association, meets once a month with any official available. The guests, to be sure, are usually sympathetic. How could they be otherwise, says Fennell: "Usually we don't get much done at the meetings. Because of the noise. But one thing we do tell the officials is how bad it is. A couple of years ago, for instance, we had a dying boy in the neighborhood. Even the airline companies felt bad about that. They cut off all traffic around our area. So at least that was one thing. At least that little guy died in peace and quiet."

Other than that concession, however, the residents of Howard Beach have not forced many airport alterations. Even an area congressman, Joe Addabbo of Ozone Park, admits his muscle has been ineffective: "We have tried to get an airport curfew, so people could sleep, but nothing has happened. We have tried to get under-the-wing markings on all planes, so we can report altitude violations, but nothing has happened. It's the old story. They put the planes before the people."

Thus with all of the resident indignation, and all the official sympathy, the people of Howard Beach have begun to believe they are losing their war with the roar. "Well, face it," says Tom Hickey, "they are not going to move this airport."

So. "What can you do?" Make the best of it. Hickey says Howard Beach is the only neighborhood in America that appreciates summer reruns on TV. "It's the only way we can find out what happened in those winter programs when the planes went over."

Scruggs Astonishes With His Banjo

By ALAN WILSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More than a quarter century ago, Earl Scruggs began doing things with a banjo that astonished the world of country-bluegrass music.

In 1972, he's still doing the same. Only this time, his dazzling impact no longer is confined solely to country musicdom.

It's turning on an entire generation of young people who realize that the fingers on Scrugg's right hand can perform musical miracles.

But the surge hasn't come without a rebel-like attitude by Scruggs himself, who in his younger days cracked a musical barrier with his renowned three-finger picking style.

About three years ago, Scruggs broke off ties with traditional hillbilly music and formed the Earl Scruggs Revue. His decision ended the famous team of Scruggs and Lester Flatt.

More than anything else, perhaps, Scruggs realized he had a lot to offer to non-country people as well. At the same time, he also was aware that the song of the young provided an endless musical playground for him.

A look at his album "I Saw The Light, With a Little Help From My Friends" tells much of the Scruggs story. On it is the talent of Arlo Guthrie, Linda Rondstadt, The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Tracy Nelson and the Earl Scruggs Revue.

Today, at least three members of the Revue are being hailed by critics as the greatest with their instruments. There's Scruggs on banjo, Vassar Clements on the fiddle and Randy Scruggs on the flattop guitar.

The other members have few musical peers: Gary Scruggs on vocals, electric guitar and harmonica; Stevie Scruggs, 14, on rhythm guitar; Josh Graves on dobro; and young Jody Maphis on drums.

Together, their talent spans everything from downhome country music to contemporary-folk to rock. The flexibility of the group's style is unequaled at present, yet it always maintains a basic link with country-folk.

During an interview at his suburban Nashville home, Scruggs, 49, recalled a jam session in 1960 with King Curtis:

"That session really turned me on to playing different types of music. It was really the turning point with my music."

It wasn't until 1967 however, that Scruggs change in attitude left the dormant stage. At the suggestion of Columbia Records, Scruggs got together with Bob Dylan, the cryptic folk songwriter.

The suggestion was like a springboard to versatility for Scuggs. No longer was he just country music, now he was blending his bag with the styles of Dylan, The Beatles, The Byrds, Joan Baez and others.

Scruggs, a modest and quiet man, chatted about the days when he believed he was confining his talents.

"I'd repeated myself over and over so many times," he said. "It grew pretty stale to say the least." He's been picking a banjo since age 4.

"That's why I like working with the boys. They know a wide variety of music," he said of his three sons.

Randy, 19, said, "After they (Scruggs and Flatt) split up, we began furthering the type of music that Gary and me were playing and that daddy was getting into." At that point in their lives, Randy and Gary, 23, were into folk-rock music.

"At least we were headed in that direction," said Gary, who sought to explain the group's broad appeal like this:

"It's because we play things we like. We don't compromise. If the situation calls for rock and roll, we play it. If it's blues, we play it too."

The decision to change his music mode, said Scruggs, was difficult. "I wanted to further the span of the banjo and get it out of the rural bag and into different types of music."

"As long as I've been playing the banjo, I've wanted more people to play it all the time. At the same time, I wanted to learn more myself," said Scruggs.

"I just do what I feel," he said. "I always know when you make a change, you're going to get some feedback from people."

If the Revue has gotten any feedback, it isn't noticeable. Their audiences have been highly receptive and of mixed generations, whether it be on college campuses or review clubs.

Diplomatic Clock Broken By Bombs

WASHINGTON (AP) — By resuming the intensified bombing of North Vietnam, President Nixon has turned back the diplomatic clock by eight months.

The White House said Monday the Vietnam peace talks are "still wide open." But it was also made clear that bombing will continue north of the 20th parallel of North Vietnam "until such time as a settlement is arrived at."

Last May 8, Nixon announced that North Vietnamese ports would be mined and rail and communication lines leading from China would be heavily bombed.

As the secret peace talks between presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho seemed to make some progress, Nixon ordered the bombing restricted to the area below the 20th parallel, still in North Vietnam, but close to the border with South Vietnam.

The effect of Monday's announcement then is to move the U.S. position back to May when Nixon said the talks in Paris had drawn from the North Vietnamese only "bombastic rhetoric and a replaying of their demand for surrender."

Then, as now, the public defense of the bombing was presented as a means of saving the lives of U.S. pilots and other Americans still in Vietnam. White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Monday. "We will not let peace talks be used as a cover for another Communist offensive."

Nevertheless, diplomatic sources do not believe that the U.S. talks with Hanoi are completely washed out or broken down beyond repair. They use the term suspension rather than breakdown.

But it appears clear that the same issue which has always dogged the peace talks has again come between peace and an end to the fighting: the political future of South Vietnam.

In the agreement that Kissinger and Tho were preparing, for example, the future role of the demilitarized zone at the 17th parallel, the future of North Vietnamese troops in the South, the infiltration of the South, the sovereignty of the Saigon government below the 17th parallel and the diplomatic standing of South Vietnam in the world were all issues.

Sen. George McGovern hit upon the political issue in criticizing the bombing renewal as evidence the administration "is chained to a government in South Vietnam that is determined to sabotage any chance for peace."

Both McGovern and the National League of Families of Prisoners of War said Kissinger and Nixon had raised false hopes for saying "peace is at hand," a remark Kissinger made Oct. 26 when a cease-fire agreement seemed near.

Noting hopes had been raised that some prisoners would be home by Christmas, the League said, "It is a bitter prospect and the disappointments and frustrations are severe."

Artist Revitalizes Junk

PLAINVIEW, N.Y. (AP) — The junkyards in this area of Long Island are supplying the material for a new kind of art in local classrooms.

Art teacher Mrs. Bernice Halpern regularly visits junkyards, supermarkets and factory trash receptacles to scavenge for her 7th and 8th graders at Howard B. Mattlin Junior High School here.

Her finds range from toothpicks and tissue rolls to metal scraps and broken electrical appliances, from which students turn out all kinds of "junk art."

Toothpick sculpture, for example, is very popular. The kids patiently glue together hundreds of toothpicks to create abstract forms. Broken clocks, toasters, hair dryers and mixers, rescued from garbage heaps, come to life again in sculptured form under the uninhibited patching, pasting and cutting of the students.

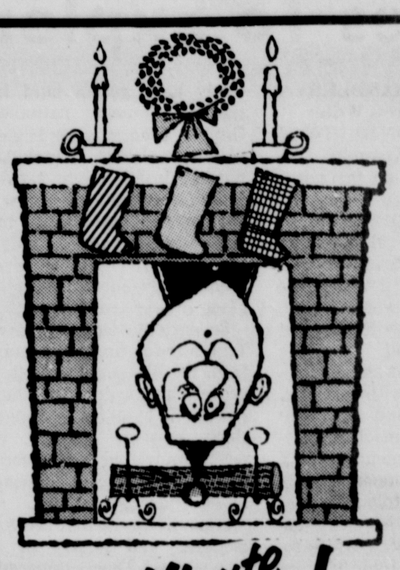

Nuts, bolts and screws, broken hammers and pliers, emerge as forms and figures, some recognizable, most not. String, rope and cord are snipped, pasted or painted into imaginative designs and drawings. One youngster made an attractive abstract from the plastic foam case in which a new typewriter was shipped. Another worked up a figure from plexiglass scrap found in a local sign company's yard.

David Scheinerman, 12, a 7th grader, finds toothpick sculpture "exciting" because it takes him into "my own private world." An 8th grader, Robert DePrisco, 13, is so enthused over his toothpick sculpture that he comes in during lunch periods to touch up and expand his free-form project. "I'm hoping to make a living in this field when I finish school," he confided.

In addition to making students aware of the different art forms in a challenging atmosphere, Mrs. Halpern hopes "they may also be stimulated to seek careers in the wide world of art, whether it be designing, advertising, window display or teaching." At the very least, she added, they are developing a sense of good taste.

Mrs. Halpern emphasizes that her junk sculpture classes get the kids into "analyzing, problem solving and decision making in the here and now."

She recalled how one youngster who was building a form in which a pants leg was kicking a can wondered how to attach the pants to the boot and to the can and then mount it on a wood base. After experimenting with different glues and staples he successfully finished the project and was "proud as punch," Mrs. Halpern reported.

Domesticating The Jungle

New settlers stroll through an agrovila, one of the 50-family farm colonies being established across Brazil along the Transamazon Highway. It's a pastoral scene in what used to be the wildest jungle in the world. Eight agrovilas are already operating, 40 are under construction and 130 more are planned — in less than two years the government has installed 10,000 people along the new road.

Transamazon Highway Seeks To Open Brazilian Riches To Exploration

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

TRANSAMAZON HIGHWAY, Brazil (AP) — Argemiro Cardosa Pereira sat on the porch of his simple wood house with that odd pride possessed by those who take their living from the land instead of wages.

No matter that it was in the middle of the Amazon Jungle.

"I'm here to stay for the rest of my life," he said.

Pereira, 35, had traveled 1,800 miles north with his wife, eight children and an antiquated sewing machine, attracted by government talk of a new future for pioneers. "It's working out," he told a visitor. "My first crops — rice and corn — were good. I wrote to my brother and told him to come here too."

Brazil hopes to move 5 million new settlers into the Amazon region — said to be the world's last unconquered frontier — by 1980. The jungle is more than half as big as the continental United States, but currently has just four inhabitants per square mile.

Government experts believe it contains fabulous quantities of iron ore, gold, copper and diamonds and millions of acres of rich farm and ranch land.

The main entry route into the area will be the 3,350-mile Transamazon Highway, now being bulldozed through the forest to link the Atlantic Ocean to the Peruvian border. After two years of work, only 900 miles are left to go, mostly in the central-west section. The road is open from the coastal city of Joao Pessoa straight westward to the once-inaccessible Tapajos River — a distance of 1,750 miles — and already has crossed the highway leading to Brasilia, the new inland capital, and the rich south.

"Look over there! Those earthovers are the kind the Americans use in Vietnam. Here in Brazil we use them for peaceful purposes," exclaimed Jose Moura Cavalcanti, head of Brazil's Federal Land Reform and Colonization Agency, known locally as INCRA. "This used to be the wildest jungle in the world. Now Brazilians are living in it," he shouted enthusiastically, roaring down the Transamazon Highway at 70 miles an hour.

Cavalcanti, a 45-year-old lawyer and ex-politician, has become the world's biggest real estate agent. He decides who gets land on 845,120 square miles of jungle earmarked for colonization — about the same as Great Britain, Spain, France, Italy, West and East Germany and Yugoslavia put together.

"It's harder going here than I expected," a homesteader sighed at an Amazonian agrovila, as the individual 50-family farm colonies are called.

INCRA provides Transamazon homesteaders with 250 acres of land, a house, tools, and six months of subsistence payments to get started. The government charges the equivalent of $365 for the land and $580 for the house, repayable in 20 years at 6 per cent interest. Brazil's government bank finances seed and planting costs, and the Agriculture Ministry buys the harvested crops. Each agrovila has a school, health center and a post office. The government says it actually spends $2,500 per family to settle people in the Amazon region.

Nearly 200,000 Brazilians already have gotten land from the government, nationwide. On the Transamazon Highway — where INCRA is making its biggest push — eight agrovilas are fully operating, 40 are under constructions and 130 more are on the planning boards. In less than two years, the government has installed 10,000 people along the new road.

Seventy-five per cent of the Transamazon homesteaders are from Brazil's overcrowded, improverished, dry northeast. President Emilio G. Medici, a stern ex-army general who rarely shows outward emotion, visited the northeast during a 1970 drought and was profoundly shocked at the wretchedness and misery of the people. That apparently sparked the military-run regime to commit the hundreds of millions of dollars needed for the Amazon development drive.

The rest of the homesteaders come from other parts of Brazil. No foreigners have been accepted yet as Transamazon colonists, but Cavalcanti has received requests from as far away as the United States, Egypt and Austria. He says he's "studying" them.

Despite occasional grumbling about minor problems, the homesteaders in the jungle seem happy. Only a handful have given up or were rejected by INCRA.

"My father, who's a veterinarian, was working for the state government in Rio Grande do Sul," said Anita Terezinha Roberto, 20, a Transamazon colonist from Brazil's highly prosperous southernmost state. "We were doing fine. But one day papa said: 'Where else could I be the owner of so much land?' He quit his job, and here we are."

Brazil plans to build a total of nearly 10,000 miles of jungle roads during the next few years, not only to link the Amazon region with the rest of the nations, but also to connect it to this country's far-flung neighbors to the north and west: French Guiana, Surinam, Guyana, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru and Bolivia.

Most of these new roads, including the Transamazon itself, will be dirt and gravel at first. The idea is to get settlers into the jungle as fast as possible. If future progress warrants it, brazil will pave the highwuys.

The roads also will take advantage of 12,000 miles of navigable jungle rivers. The Transamazon zigzags to connect the main southern tributaries of the Amazon River. Isolated gas stations, hotels and public telephones already have sprouted along the jungle roads. Tourist amenities are still scarce.

Transamazon homesteaders first planted subsistence crops such as rice, bran and corn. The Agriculture Ministry now wants to get them to begin planting coffee, sugar cane, cocoa and black pepper — first to supply the Brazilian market and later to export.

"Our experimental results with sugar cane exceeded our most ambitious predictions," said Paulo del Souza, government agronomist with a degree from the University of Maine. "The Amazon Jungle could someday be the world's principal sugar supplier."

One thing Brazilian officials agreed on when the Amazon project started was that they really didn't know anything for sure about the region. Written off for generations as an uninhabitable "green hell," the jungle has revealed surprises these past two years:

—The jungle is hilly, not flat as it looks from the air.

—Large areas of the jungle — especially about 300 miles south of the Amazon River, where the Transamazon Highway is going through — are high and dry and not affected by seasonal flooding.

—Health and weather conditions in many parts are less severe than was feared. The New Brazil agrovila, for example, enjoys constant temperatures in the low 80s, granted with accompanying high humidity and a six-month rainy season. Yet visitors have said it's not as oppressive as midsummer in Chicago.

—Amazon soil is thin and delicate. The belief that "you just drop a seed on the ground and something will grow" is generally false.

INCRA requires Transamazon homesteaders to leave jungle vegetation standing on at least half their land, so that tree roots will keep the topsoil firm. In parts of the jungle not under government control, however, ignorant peasants have ruined vast amounts of land by cutting down all the trees — a fact that has alarmed conservationists abroad.

One charge from foreign ecologists the Brazilian government completely dismisses is that development of the Amazon Jungle will endanger the world's oxygen supply. "Of course, the Amazon is the world's biggest forest. But it's a geologically mature forest that consumes all the oxygen it produces," Cirne Lima said. "The Amazon Jungle does not give off surplus oxygen."

The Transamozon Highway has awakened a frontier spirit in once sleepy river ports along its path. Altamira, a base of operations for several government agencies and private construction companies, has grown in population from 5,000 to nearly 15,000 in two years.

Wilson Appointed As Scouting Head

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Defensive standout Larry Wilson, who announced his retirement last week, was appointed Tuesday as the director of the St. Louis football Cardinals' scouting program, William V. Bidwill, team owner, announced.

"We hope Larry Wilson's contributions to football in the future will be as great as they have been in the past," Bidwill said. Wilson, who held ten Cardinal team records, retired after Sunday's 24-23 win over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"The football Cardinals are starting to build a new organization," Wilson said. He added that he was looking forward to his new assignment.

Warrensburg HS Coach Resigns

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Jim Dahman, head football coach at Warrensburg High School, resigned Tuesday night and George Arnold, formerly assistant coach, was named to replace him.

Dahman had asked to be relieved of his coaching duties and the Warrensburg School Board accepted his resignation at a meeting. Dahman will remain as a drivers education and health teacher.

Missouri Tigers Head to Arizona

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Tigers football team was scheduled to arrive in Tempe, Ariz. today and begin working out for its Fiesta Bowl appearance Saturday night.

The Tigers completed two weeks of practice in the Hearnes Building Tuesday with a 90-minute workout stressing basic offensive and defensive plays.

Coach Al Onofrio said his club had not been working on any "trick plays" in preparation for their meeting with the Arizona State Sun Devils.

He said the Tigers' opponents will be quick and agressive on defense, adding that the offense of the Arizona club spoke for itself. The Sun Devils led the nation this season in total offense and scoring.

The Tigers are scheduled to work out under the lights at Tempe tonight.
